MILITARY NOT TO INTERVENE

Walton Says He Will Not Obstruct "Pretended" Election.

URGES ALL TO PRESERVE PEACE

Opponents Ignore Oklahoma Governor's Call For a Special Election Dec. 6 on Initiative Petition No. 79, Statewide Election Being Held In Defiance of the Chief's Executive's Order—Day's Developments.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 2.—Governor J. C. Walton issued a call for a special election Dec. 6, on initiative petition No. 79, which, if passed, would empower the state legislature to assemble itself for the purpose of instituting impeachment proceedings against the chief executive.

"I was challenged to leave this measure to the tribunal of the people," the governor said in explaining his sudden announcement of the call. "I accept that challenge and fix the date as Dec. 6."

Despite this maneuver of the governor's, leaders of the anti-Walton group announced they would ignore the call. "He accepts the challenge," said W. D. McBee, "too late. He can meet it today, not 60 days from now. Walton is whipped and he knows it."

It is therefore certain that the statewide special election on No. 79 and the other five referendum amendments will be held in defiance of the governor's order of postponement and threat of arms and his latest call for the initiative election Dec. 6.

Governor Walton, visibly apprehensive of public order, issued the following proclamation, addressed to the people of the state of Oklahoma and all peace officers of the state: "It has come to my notice that a rumor is being circulated that I will interfere by means of the military to prevent or obstruct the pretended election advertised to take place today. This is to advise you that the military forces will not intervene in this pretended election, and I hereby request all citizens of this state to preserve peace and good order."

There are five constitutional referendum amendments to be voted on, as well as No. 79. They are: An employee's compensation act; a $55,000,000 soldier's bonus for farm and home aid; a 3 1/2 percent valorem tax limitation act; a bank depositors' guaranty fund act; and an act providing that no high state official shall be eligible to office unless for three years previous a qualified elector of the state.

The foregoing five proposition are Governor Walton's pet measures. It was when his opponents ran in petition No. 79 as a rider, intended to oust him as governor, that he revoked the election call he had issued.

In the election itself "petition No. 79" stands out as the vital question. If No. 79 carries, the anti-Waltonites will claim a triumph and the downfall of the governor himself, for the initiative petition is aimed to give the legislature power to assemble itself. Once assembled, impeachment proceedings will be instituted against Walton at once, and there is scarcely a political observer in the state, including the governor's friends, who does not acknowledge that a meeting of the legislature is tantamount to impeachment.

However, the tangle would not end there, in the opinion of a great many persons conversant with state affairs. Governor Walton, already declaring the election invalid, would not recognize the right of the legislature to meet, would attempt to disperse it and would refuse to surrender his office under such an impeachment, it is reliably reported.

TAFT ACT FIRST

Form of Ohio's Official Ballot Goes to the Printer.

Columbus, Oct. 2.—Secretary of State Brown has sent to the printer the form of official ballot to be submitted to the voters at the November election, bearing the three laws that are to be voted on, as well as the three proposed constitutional amendments. The Taft law referendum will have first place on the separate ballot on which the three laws are to be printed. The Albaugh referendum will have second place and the initiated old age pension law will be third. The workmen's compensation amendment will have first place on a separate ballot, the "white male" elimination proposal second, and the amendment covering the publication of proposed amendments or referenda on laws, in daily newspapers, third.

EASY FOR CARPENTIER

Joe Beckett Knocked Out In the First Round.

London, Oct. 2.—Joe Beckett was knocked out by Georges Carpentier last night in the first round inside of 15 seconds. Beckett now holds the world's record for quick loss of a big championship fight.

When the gong rang for the opening round Beckett led with his left to Carpentier's jaw. Georges crouched and then, springing like a panther, shot over a left, followed by a terrific right to the point of Beckett's jaw. The British champion went down for the count of seven, and as he rose, groggy, Georges shot in another heavy right to the jaw. Beckett fell like a log to his back. When the referee had counted five the Englishman's seconds threw in a towel, as there was no chance of Beckett's being able to continue the fight.

Then pandemonium broke loose. Hundreds of men and women in evening dress led many thousands of boxing fans who packed the Olympia in booing the "hope of Britain."

Carpentier received $45,000 for his 15 seconds of work, while Beckett was paid $15,000 for winning the new quick losing record.

HARDING PLAN MAY BE UPSET

Coolidge's Advisers Rap Restrictive Rail Legislation.

FULL OF DYNAMITE, THEY SAY

Declare There Will Be a Lot Said on the Transportation Act During the Next Session of Congress, but That Nothing Will Be Done Toward Changing the Present Law—Would Leave Railroads Alone.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Indications are multiplying at the white house that President Coolidge is being advised against recommending to congress the proposed regulatory and restrictive railroad legislation.

This information does not come from representatives of the railway executives, who are fighting to uphold the present transportation act, which guarantees a 5 1/2 per cent return on railroad investments. Some of the president's own party advisers and officials within the administration are telling him the railroad question is full of dynamite and had best be left alone. Hardly a day passes that the future of the railroads is not a subject of conference at the executive offices.

President Harding on his fateful speaking trip across the country advocated these things: Compulsory consolidation of the railroads; a clause in the transportation act to put teeth in the decisions of the railroad labor board, and withdrawal of the federal guarantee of financial support to the railroads, at least in the form the support is given under the existing law.

The advice that is being given President Coolidge by party and administration counselors, as ascertained from more than one of his recent callers, is that the transportation act is still in an experimental stage and that in the two years it has been in operation economic conditions have not been such as to give it a fair trial. They argue that the country was in the midst of the panic of 1921 when the Esch-Cummins act was passed, followed by the coal and rail strikes of 1922, all of which had a direct and adverse effect on railroad operations and earnings.

Chairman Hooper of the railroad labor board and others of the president's advisers contend that the railroads should be left alone for a reasonable time under the present more favorable business and financial conditions before there is any tampering with the existing legislation. To undertake a revision of the transportation act at the coming session of congress, they assert, would be to invite a general business depression.

Nevertheless it appears certain that a number of amendments to the transportation act will be offered when congress assembles. But their fate is another matter. One of the president's close advisers summed up the situation with the flat prediction that there would be a lot said on the subject, but in the final analysis congress would do nothing toward changing the present law.

HORSES MAY NOT MEET

Owner of "My Own" Wants Mile and a Half Race With Zev.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Admiral Cary T. Grayson rejected the offer of Sam Hildreth to race Zev against the Admiral's My Own over a mile and a half, the distance over which the international race with Papyrus is to be run, still stands. "Neither horse has any assurance that Papyrus would wait for him after a mile and an eighth," Grayson declared in a telegram to August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey club.

The whole affair is now up in the air again and racing circles are rife with speculation whether or not the pair of stars will meet. In case they do not, the committee must make the selection of the American entry on Saturday, as required in the conditions for the race, basing its choice on what both horses have shown.

PLAN FOSTERED BY ASHURST

Would Change Time for Convening of New Congress.

ALSO DATE OF INAUGURATION

Arizona Senator Announces He is at Work on Two Amendments to the Federal Constitution Which Will Be Introduced at Next Session—Alleged Disadvantages of the Existing System Pointed Out.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The much discussed proposal of changing the time for a newly elected congress to assemble, as well as changing the date of the president's inauguration, will be brought again before congress as soon as the December session opens.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, announced that he is at work on two amendments to the constitution which will be introduced by him to effect these changes.

Under one amendment congress will be asked to assemble at least once each year, the session to begin the first Monday in January. The terms of senators and representatives will be changed to begin on that date. Short sessions would be done away with.

The other amendment will designate the third Monday in January as the day of the president's inauguration. This change would enable congress to be in session long enough to canvass the vote cast for presidential and vice-presidential electors and announce the result before the day set for their inauguration.

The purpose in Senator Ashurst's mind in suggesting these changes is to make it impossible for senators or representatives to act upon legislation after they have been defeated in November election.

The disadvantages of the existing system were illustrated after the general election of 1922. In that contest thirteen senators and more than a hundred members of the house were retired, among them being some of the most important leaders, including Republican leader Mondell of the house and Chairman McCumber of the senate finance committee.

Notwithstanding their retirement, however, the existing law permitted these defeated members to return to their seats and vote on legislation in regard to which they were completely out of sympathy with their electorate. An effort to effect a change was made when the senate passed the Norris resolution to change the date of the inauguration and the time for congressional sessions to begin. This measure did not reach a vote in the house.

Senator Ashurst believes there is imperative need for the change. He believes that by bringing the new congress into power two months after it has been chosen it will more certainly reflect the views of the people on legislative questions. Moreover, it would end the practice of permitting a legislator to exercise his vote after the people had repudiated him at the polls.

WEBB HEARD

Tells the District Attorney the Story of His Married Life.

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 2.—"This case is going to be more sensational than the Ward case," said Coroner Edward F. Fitzgerald after a long conference with District Attorney Arthur Rowland on the death of wealthy Mrs. Gertrude Gorman Webb, who, it is believed, was poisoned.

A short time afterwards Charles H. Webb, husband of the dead woman, arrived here to tell the district attorney the story of his married life. Webb was accompanied by counsel. The district attorney explained that no summons has been issued, but that Webb had been invited to his office and had agreed to tell his story.

Coroner Fitzgerald was notified by Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, toxicologist, that there were indications of poison in the viscera of Mrs. Webb. He was not able to state, however, whether there was enough poison to have caused death. "I have certain indications of an irritant poison," said Dr. Goettler and I am following the lead."

Dusseldorf, Oct. 2.—The French military proclaimed a state of siege for Dusseldorf, but the city wears a normal aspect. The French report Sunday's casualties at ten killed and 200 wounded, when the crowds attending the meeting of the Rhineland separatists was fired on in the streets.

TO HALT CORN BORER

Extension of Federal Quarantine Against the Pest Announced.

Columbus, Oct. 2.—The horticultural board of the federal department of agriculture has announced the extension of federal quarantine against the European corn borer to include additional cities and towns in Ohio, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan. As the pest gradually spreads to new fields, the area under quarantine is widened. The new territory becomes subject to the quarantine regulations aimed to keep the pest in check. Cities and towns in Cuyahoga, Geauga, Ashtabula, Erie, Huron, Lorain, Lucas, Ottawa, Sandusky and Wood counties are to be placed under regulations to keep the pest in check.

SELFISH INTERESTS ACCUSED BY LABOR

Public Schools Used for Propaganda Purposes, it is Charged.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 2.—Among the important problems which have been taken up by the American Federation of Labor and the consideration of which will be one of the tasks of the convention is the proper elucidation of children in studies.

Following the keynote speech of President Samuel Gompers, in which he demanded legislation for the protection of children, the report of the American Federation of Labor committee on education was made public. The report was prepared by a special committee appointed to investigate the selection or preparing and publishing of text books prepared for classes of workers.

The report states that charges have been reiterated that social and economic studies as taught in public schools are "lacking in that broad inclusive vision that reflects the common life." The report purports to present facts on social studies in public schools indicating what is wrong with text books and instruction.

"In recent years there have been well authenticated reports that selfish interests are seeking to use the public schools for propaganda purposes and are undermining the dignity and independence of the teaching profession," the report says. "Such actions strike at the very heart of successful democracy and tend to tear down the usefulness of the structure of public education, which the members of organized labor, in common with other public spirited citizens, have striven to build up. A manifestation of the attempt to restrict public school teaching, which is both menacing and undeniable, is the array of scattered cases throughout the country where teachers or other educational authorities have actually been dismissed or suspended for holding views distasteful to industrial and financial groups, or even for joining teachers' unions."

MILADY CHOOSES STYLES TO SUIT

Will Be Women's Fault if They Fail to Select Proper and Becoming Clothes.

The American woman looks to the designers of her own land for her best expression in clothes, and this season much has been done to please the smartly dressed woman, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. The designers say we no longer must be extremely young in our appearance, neither must we make any effort to be too noticeably dignified. We are to be allowed, it seems, to choose our own styles from among so many models and designs that it will be our own fault if we should fail to find just the proper and most becoming thing.

Among the many creations we find high lights. They are important in that they go to make up the fashion, but none of them is so startling as to constitute a complete change. The gowns as they appear to the casual eye are still straight and rather long. But the straightness is made up of more fullness of material than has been the case in the past. The length is a static thing that stays where it was through the last season, and, in some cases, is shorter by some inches. The tailored suits of tweed, for instance, will be quite short, and as the skirts are tight they are often slit at the left side, so that the leg appears when walking almost up to the knee.

One designer goes so far as to believe that American women eventually will wear bloomers, instead of petticoats, under all of their daytime dresses. She is making models of printed crepe, of white broadcloth, of rajah silks—in fact, of any fabric that is used for wear during the day-time.

The skirts open at one side all the way to the waistline. They button at the hem with three buttons. They can be left closed or swing open and loose. And the bloomers underneath, made of the same material, serve to complete that dress.

Sleeves Large and Flowing.

Sleeves are still large and flowing in many of the costumes. They are trimmed gorgeously. In some of the suits and dresses they hold the center of interest, pushing all other features of the design aside. As the skirts grow wider and are trimmed with flouncings and panelings, the sleeves sink into a secondary place, and then, in their humility, are made short and tight and with no trimming whatsoever.

Draped dresses are the order of the day. The silk or crepe or the light woolen material is taken in hand by the clever designer and the folds are swirled and swooped about the figure until there results a frock that is simply a series of beautifully conceived lines put together in a miraculous way. For these dresses there is little or no trimming. If there is a girdle or a buckle or a bow to finish off the ending of their folds, these decorations are done in colors and shapes that harmonize splendidly with the general design of the frock itself.

Evening frocks are in two distinct classes. One of these is the draped class, and the materials used in making are crepe and satin and moire, the latter being the newest thing upon the horizon. Then there are the frocks with full skirts and tight little bodices. They are made from taffeta or many layers of chiffon and they are particularly quaint in their designs, suited to the more youthful types of figure, which can afford to carry about layers of fullness and many bows with dripping ribbon trimmings.

Printed Dress Is Featured.

The printed dress is one of the features for spring. One sees it everywhere. There is no end to the patterns and designs and the combinations of color that are represented by the frocks of printed silk. They are made, usually, over the plainest of models. But they certainly are becoming and beautiful in the extreme, and every woman is likely to decide upon having at least one of them. When the whole dress is not made of the printed material, then half of it manages to show a pattern, and the lower part of the dress is made of a woolen material or a plain silk or something that contrasts with the pattern of the silk above. There are printed silks and printed chiffons, all of them most interesting when made up in the plain little frocks which will be popular all through the spring and summer seasons.

Dresses for the street are made of the softest of woolen materials, some in kasha cloth, some in lightweight velours and others in wool crepes. One of the newest outlines is the skirt with three tiers. These flounces are made over a circular pattern, a skirt that is particularly becoming to the slim and youthful figure. The dress of this character has trimmings of black around the edges and the frock itself is made of a light shade of tan. After the black has been applied along the edges there ensues an interval of black and white striped ribbon that helps to accentuate the decoration.

Wraps for the spring are made along large and ample lines. There is, first of all, the straight coat, which ties on the side with a bow of ribbon and usually has a huge bow of satin ribbon to tie the coat together on one side. There is a fur collar, too, and a straight line to the coat which carries out the idea of the silhouette of the season. Some of these coats are embroidered in all-over designs and there is no portion of the coat which is left without that embroidered ornamentation. Even the collars are embroidered and made so wide that they fold about the throat in a graceful manner.

Short Coats Are Draped.

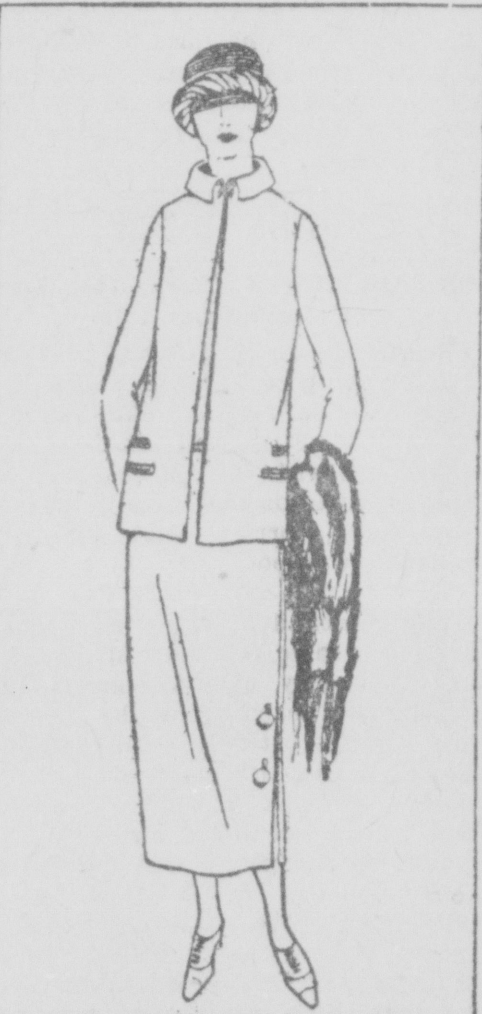

There are short, graceful and draped coats which will be a strong feature of the early spring styles and they promise to carry over into the summer. A short coat can be made of almost any material. It may be embroidered, made of some brightly colored fabric, or it can have the same tone as the skirt; made of another sort of material. The fact is that there is so much chance with these little bloused jackets to create differing and unusual effects that they have been pounced upon by the smart women and worn so that they display the foremost elements of fashion.

Light-colored short coats will be worn with white skirts or lighter-toned dresses. And the dark coats covered with embroidery will be worn with the darker toned silk dresses during the early spring to demonstrate the fashion as it exists at present.

There are some straight box coats to be seen and these are made of the same materials that go to make up the shorter boxline coats. Then we are working our way slowly toward a three-quarter coat which will be popular about the middle of the summer.

Many of the three-piece suits are made with short coats that come to a long waistline and end there, showing a skirt that is made of the same material and a bodice or a top to the skirt that is made of some brilliantly contrasting material.

Many of the three-piece suits show coats that are exaggerated in their shortness, but others are displaying coats longer and more conservative in line. If a woman is at all large about the hips she does not want to indulge too strenuously in the coat that spans across the hips, but she can well afford to adhere to the coat that is of three-quarter length and without a belt or anything to accentuate the hip line or the waist. Many of the costume suits are made on this general plan and they are really the most satisfactory things that the American designers have produced. They show a surface that is dark in color or light in tone with the same shade running all the way from the shoulders to the heels, and then they have blouses or bodices, as the case may be, that are brilliant and altogether charming in their coloring. When the coat swings apart in the front, as it always does in the springtime, the blouse underneath plays a large part in the design of the costume as a whole.

This vogue for the costume suit has brought the blouse into much greater prominence than it has held for some time past.

STATE TAX LEVIES' REPEAL IS EFFECTIVE

Last Measure Republican Governor Signed Provides New School Funds.

Columbus, O.—The first bill passed by the present Ohio general assembly is one of the last to become effective. It went into effect under special provision in the act itself. The measure was introduced by Representative Dunn of Wood county, Republican floor leader in the house, on Jan. 2, the second day of the session, and repeals all direct state tax levies for highways and weak school districts. The bill passed both houses the day it was introduced and was the last legislative measure signed by Governor Harry L. Davis, his approval being given four days before the inauguration of Vic Donahey as governor. Davis recommended the repeal of the state levies and that the need for highways and weak school districts be met with appropriations from the general fund.

The Davis administration held the surplus created through savings in operating expenses due to the reorganization of the state government was sufficient to warrant a reduction in taxes through the repeal of state levies.

The Dunn tax repealing act provides that for the purpose of affording the advantages of free education to all youth of the state there shall be levied annually a tax of 2.65 mills, the proceeds of which are to be retained by the respective counties for the support of the schools therein. To meet the needs of weak school districts, the new law provides for an educational equalization fund to consist of such sums as the general assembly may appropriate from the general revenue fund.

Some Yarn, Eh?

"Several years ago," said Binks, "I raised some watermelons which grew to an enormous size. One day a three-masted schooner went aground on the mud flats just below my house. I immediately rolled one of these huge melons to the side of the stranded craft, cut the melon in two and enough juice came out of it to float the schooner safely into deep water."—New York Globe.

HARTMAN THEATER

A play that has been running in England for more than two years and is now in its second year in Dublin, Ireland, is to be seen at the Hartman theater Columbus the week beginning Monday night, October 1. It is "The Irish Jew" from the pen of John MacDonagh and it has been given a special production for this country. Morris Waxman has the titular role and it gives this fine actor a character which he is eminently well fitted to portray. Supporting him is a cast which was selected with special care and which is an excellent one in all particulars.

On the other side of the Atlantic people vied with each other in registering the greatest number of attendances, which is explained in that the play delighting at first sight, is of such a character as to make one wish to see it again and again.

At the first rehearsal in New York stage hands sat quietly for the first few minutes and then began to laugh and continued to laugh to such an extent that they cried. It is a tradition of the theater that if a play makes the stage hands laugh its success is assured.

Charles O'Brien Kennedy, for many years with Arthur Hopkins enterprises has given "The Irish Jew" a splendid production. A more capable director was hard to find and he has made of the present play a genuine success.

The Hartman engagement includes matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders should be sent at once to the Hartman box office in order to insure obtaining good reservations, it is urged.

Baldheads, Rejoice!
Successful experiments have been made in a new method for planting hair upon bald heads. It has been found that baldness never affects certain parts of the back of the head. Long thin strips of hair-covered skin cut from these parts may be grafted upon the bald area to form furrows. These fertile parts, when brushed, entirely cover the bald lines.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TEXAS MAN BREEDS QUEEN
BEES FOR EVERY MARKET

By Use of Artificial Means He
Fools the Bees and Reaps
Income of $50,000 a Year.

Raising and selling queen bees bring to E. B. Ault an annual revenue of more than $50,000, and most of this is profit. Mr. Ault's queen bee farm is near Calallen, Tex., and is in its twelfth year of successful operation. He ships the queen bees all over the United States and to foreign lands, including Australia, Japan and countries of Europe and South America. He also ships many colonies of working bees.

Breeding queen bees is done partly by artificial means. There would be no money in the industry if the natural breeding method of the bees were depended on for queens, it is explained. It was discovered that the working bees, like carpenters, performed their work according to the plans and specifications of the architect; so Mr. Ault began building large cells for queens in the artificial wax comb foundation. These queen cells are then filled and produce queens, according to the foundation specifications.

As a result of this artificial method Mr. Ault obtains about 100 queens from every hive of 2,000 to 3,000 working bees, instead of only one queen. The bees are fooled, but they do not seem to mind it.

Queen bees vary in price. When the demand is slow they sell for as low as $1, but ordinarily they bring $2.50 to $2.75 each. Just now there is an extraordinarily good demand for them and the price is on the upward trend.

MISS FLORENCE A. YATES,
AMERICA'S NEWEST HEIRESS

Miss Florence Argall Yates, fifteen years old, of Beloit, Wis., whose father died leaving her sole heiress to $13,000,000, making her America's newest heiress, but one would never know it to look at her or talk to her for she's just a regular girl. She's not the least bit prudish or "stuck up" and her money doesn't mean any more to her than a comfortable home, a chance to get an education and become a kindergarten teacher, for that's her ambition. Florence doesn't wear elaborate clothes, nor drive her own car as her wealth might easily allow. She would much rather play tennis or take part in some other outdoor sport, and folks about her town who have known her and watched her grow up, say that she's a "chip off the old block."

RING SMALL; WEDDING HALTS

Groom Insists on Full Ceremony, So Change Is Made.

There was an unusual interruption to a wedding ceremony in a north London register office when the bridegroom put the ring on his bride's finger and found it would not go beyond the knuckle. He made several attempts to get the ring on, but without success.

Saying that the jeweler must have mistaken the size, the bridegroom asked the registrar if he could wait till he got it changed. The official said that the ring did not matter, as they had both said the contracting words and were legally married. All that remained was to sign the register.

"Oh, but we must be married properly," replied the bridegroom. "I want my wife to have her ring now and in your presence." The bride agreed, so leaving her in the office, he hurried to the jeweler's and returned with a larger ring.

Declaring that he thought the courts would not punish him, Leslie Spraley was arrested at New York city for stealing $1,300 from his employer. The youth said a Chicago judge recently decided that messengers were not wholly to blame for stealing from their employers.

Found Wrangel Island in 1867.
The first authentic account concerning Wrangel island, which has been attracting so much international interest, was from Captain Long, master of the American whaling barque Nile, who in the summer of 1867 on a whaling voyage, named this land Wrangel land, after Baron Wrangel and two of the headlands he named after one of his crew named Thomas, this man being the first to see the island.

The promontory Hawaii he named after the island, where in winter, in the harbor of Honolulu, the whalers made their rendezvous there to outfit for another season. These names are today on the charts of Wrangel island.

Aug. 12, 1881, Capt. Calvin Cooper, commanding the United States revenue steamship Corwin, landed and took possession of Wrangel land in the name of the United States of America.

Trip Through New Guinea Costly.

New Guinea is a rough country to travel in—absolutely virgin jungle, without even a path other than the knife-cut paths carved out of the wall of vegetation that covers the greater part of the island. And it is a costly thing to travel through the jungle, for everything you are likely to wear, eat and use in the trip must be carried with you on the backs of your native porters; the jungle is innocent of even the poorest sort of store or shop. Man transport is expensive, too, and a moderate estimate for the cost of a tour inland by two white men and thirty native carriers is not less than $500 a month. The lonely white man can travel in most countries; in New Guinea he is unknown. Arctic exploration is not more strenuous than a journey through the interior of New Guinea.—Adventure Magazine.

STRANGE RULE COMES TO END

South Rhodesia Granted Right of Self-Government.

GOVERNED BY CORPORATION

South Rhodesia, to which Great Britain has just granted the right of self-government, was expected to be a second Rand, but has turned out a South African Kansas, observes a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"At present South Rhodesia has a government like none other in the world. It discloses the only instance where a great corporation, the British South Africa company, governs a vast and populous country in which a considerable white population is actively engaged in business, politics and farming. Hitherto and elsewhere that form of government has been reserved for native, and usually backward, peoples.

"The country's future status came up automatically at this time under the charter granted by Victoria at the behest of Cecil Rhodes, which charter provided that at the end of 25 years, or at the end of any subsequent ten-year period, it might be renewed, altered or annulled. The quarter century expired in 1914, when it was reaffirmed. Discussions about action to be taken in 1924 brought the announcement that the country is to join the family of British states.

"It is hard to realize how far South Africa has emerged from a 'dark continent' status; and South Rhodesia's rise has been kaleidoscopic. Should an airplane land you today at its metropolis Bulawayo, you might be invited to lecture about your trip before a group of gentlemen in evening dress. You would find the conveniences of a modern hostelry in Bulawayo's big hotel.

Pain in Head! Cut Off a Head!

"Stroll down a broad, paved, electric-lighted street, however, and you would encounter many natives, peaceable and nearly nude. Less than fifty years ago the blood-thirsty Lobengula held sway over the war-like Matabeles. This crochety chief had an idea that a pain could be cured by the sacrifice of a head from any chance passerby.

"With the finesse of a William Penn, Cecil Rhodes bought the mining rights to Lobengula's domain for a monthly pension, a thousand rifles and some ammunition. But the empire builder's most famous exploit occurred many years later in this, his namesake colony. After a native outbreak was put down by Lord Plumer and 800 soldiers the tribesmen took to the Matapos mountains. Thither marched Rhodes, with only two companions, unarmed, and camped along the hills until he had interviewed every important chief and concluded a peace. For two months he remained, surrounded by fierce, blood-thirsty savages.

"While in these mountains on that precarious mission Rhodes is said to have selected the site of his world-famous burial place, which he called 'the view of the world.' Between two great boulders is the mountain-top grave with the simple inscription, 'Here Lie the Remains of Cecil John Rhodes.'

"A second grave, that of Dr. Jameson, recalled the occasion when this 'slight, bald, little man' led his heroic handful of men against the Matabeles at Bulawayo. There the savage horde made their last stand after a series of forays against settlers. Jameson wired Rhodes for advice and got the laconic reply, 'Read Luke, fourteen, thirty-one.'

"Jameson sent for a missionary Bible and found this injunction, 'Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he may be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand.' Jameson wired back, in substance, 'All right I have read it,' and then planted the British flag firmly in Bulawayo and crushed Lobengula's power.

"Everybody knows, in an academic way, of South Rhodesia's great natural spectacle, the Victoria falls. Glibly reciting its dimensions—a mile wide and from 250 to nearly 300 feet high—means little. The imaginative person might stand on Capitol Hill, in Washington, look at the Capitol's dome and try to visualize a sheet of water higher than that dome extending all the way from the capitol, down Pennsylvania avenue, to the White House.

Bridge Publicity Device.

"Even then he would miss the roar audible ten miles away and the feel of the mist which carries almost as far.

"The many-sided Cecil Rhodes had an eye for publicity. It was he who insisted that the bridge should be built near enough to the falls so the spray would wet the cars as trains rolled by. Engineers told him 'no,' as they told Harriman when he proposed his 'wild scheme' of a bridge across Great Salt lake. Both Rhodes and Harriman had their way.

"But in his hope for South Rhodesia's future Rhodes was mistaken. The colony prospered but not from the mines, as Rhodes expected. Instead farming and grazing lands are the magnets which drew the 35,000 white men to this remote area; enough, even with nearly 800,000 natives, to be given the reins of government."

CREAM MARKET

Farmers Will Maintain Truck Routes All Over the County.

The plans for cooperative marketing of cream in Pickaway county as they were taken up and discussed at the Farm Bureau office on Saturday afternoon, September 29, call for a system of collecting cream by maintaining truck routes over the entire county. Details of this have not yet been worked out, another meeting of committees from all townships has been called for Monday evening, October 8, in the Farm Bureau office.

E. D. Waid, representing the Ohio Farm Bureau federation presented figures to show that cooperative marketing in more than sixty communities of Ohio had resulted in the general price for butter fat being raised to all producers. The success of the Cooperative association according to Mr. Waid depends upon a large volume of cream being handled on business principles. The plan calls for a membership association with signed up contracts and the payment of dividends to the members monthly.

Several meetings are scheduled in different parts of Pickaway county at which the cream marketing association will be more fully explained. One scheduled during the coming week will be in connection with the Washington Grange on Friday evening.

TO IMPROVE ROAD.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held Monday a petition was passed making application to the state highway department for state aid for resurfacing the eastern end of the Cincinnati and Zanesville road known as the Lancaster pike from the present termination of the improvement to the Fairfield county line, a distance of three and a half miles. The improvement will be the same as the western end of the road, bituminous macadam. When this section of the road is completed we will have an improved road running east and west from Fairfield to Fayette county, clear across the county.

A CHALLENGE.

Robtown won from the Yellowbud Stars Sunday 10 to 2 and will play Derby at Robtown next Sunday. The Robtown boys are playing firstclass ball and would like to book a game with Ohio Utilities team at Robtown for October 14, for the county championship. We will divide 60-40 percent of gate receipts. Winner take 60 per cent, losers 40 per cent. We will show them some real ball and a good clean game. Utility manager, please write Grant Sines, Circleville, Ohio, R. F. D., 5.

Irish Free State Represented.

London, Oct. 2.—The opening speech of Premier Baldwin to the imperial conference was remarkable more for its omissions than for its contents. The premier was silent in his talk to the dominion heads regarding his attitude toward the policy of Premier Poincare, but his remarks did contain a stern reminder to Europe on the necessity of meeting obligations. The outstanding feature of the gathering, in which all met, as the premier declared, "on a footing of perfect equality," was the presence of Irish Free State representatives, to whom the premier extended "cordial welcome on joining our councils."

Luis Firpo Married.

New York, Oct. 2.—Luis Angel Firpo is married. The secret came out when he made application to become an American citizen. He also gave his age as 28, instead of 26, as had been generally reported, and also appeared in pugilistic records, and his birthplace as Junin, Buenos Aires. His wife is an Argentinian.

KEPT THE "NAILS"

How Trustees of Early Yankee Church Solved Problem.

Boston Merchant Made the Mistake of His Life When He Wrote "No Errors Rectified."

In one of the older churches of New Haven there is a quaint and beautiful baptismal service set of silver, and not less quaint is the tale of how the old church came by it.

The year that Yorktown fell the trustees of the church decided that the frame building must have repairs, and sent to Boston for six kegs of nails. In course of time the kegs arrived on one of the huge and slow-moving freight wagons of the day and were duly delivered to the carpenters.

Nails in those days were scarce and expensive, each one being the handwork of a blacksmith, and, as a consequence of the methods followed in their manufacture, the smiths usually turning out a hundred or so on days when they had nothing in particular to engage their attention, they were apt to be very irregular in size and degree of perfection. The delight of the chief carpenter was, therefore, great when, knocking in the head of one keg, he found the nails of remarkably uniform size and indicating the best workmanship and material.

"Ye were in luck, deacon," he remarked to one of the trustees who had been present to give receipt for the six kegs, "for these be Spanish nails, made at Toledo. Belike they were taken from some Spanish ship by a sea rover."

He began to beat in the head of another keg and uttered an exclamation of astonishment.

"These be n't nails, deacon!" he gasped, his eyes staring.

They were not. The keg was full of Spanish silver dollars.

"So I see, Master Thomas," the deacon remarked quietly. "Suppose you head up that keg again, and I will call a meeting of the trustees to discuss this matter. We must write to the Boston merchant concerning it."

The meeting of the trustees was duly held that very day, and long and earnest were the arguments. What was the proper course for them to follow? Should they simply write the Boston merchant that one of the kegs had been found to be full of silver dollars? The church was poor and the deacons were Connecticut Yankees to the bone. It was obvious that the Boston merchant had obtained the keg in some unusual manner and it was a logical assumption that he had paid for it on a nail value basis, as he had sold it.

Then uprose one who might have done mighty things in finance had he lived a century and a half later.

"Let us," he suggested, "write to this merchant of Boston town simply the facts that there was an error in shipment." And so they did.

In time came the merchant's reply. He said that he had bought the kegs from a privateersman; that they were sold as bought, and that "no mistakes could be rectified."

And there is no doubt that the deacons chuckled somewhat dryly as they ordered the silver dollars of Spain melted down and cast into that service which can be pointed out today to the youth of New Haven as an example of—of, well, something.

The Araguaya Whale.

On the third day out, writes Reginald Pound in the July Wide World magazine, we were paddling vigorously along the Araguaya (Brazil) by way of keeping ourselves warm in the chilly morning air, when I was startled by the sound of a short, sharp explosion, like that of a rifle shot, coming from just behind me. Turning round, I spotted what is known as the "Araguaya whale," a big, gray-green fish, measuring seven or eight feet in length, and almost as much in girth. The bote, as it is known, is perfectly harmless and will follow a canoe with the sagacity of a dog, indulging in all sorts of queer aquatic tricks. Occasionally it will take it into its head to dive with reckless abandon into the depths, following which the observer may see hundreds of smaller fish leap into the air in order to escape its violent rush.

New Substitute for Fur.

Certain kinds of fleeces not well adapted to spinning by a newly-invented process can be manufactured into a rich, fur-like material, which is supposed to present a valuable hygienic advantage over skin furs for clothing because the material is mounted on a wool foundation, is reported by Consul General T. W. Sammons, from Australia. The inventor claims that this material has an excellent appearance, that it is suitable for all purposes for which fur is utilized, and for clothing where the utmost warmth, the least weight, and the maximum of protection are demanded.

Wren's Science Museum.

During the recent Wren celebration interest was focussed on St. Paul's and the beautiful London churches designed by him, but attention should be called to the fact that he designed the Old Ashmolean museum at Oxford. This was the first public museum of natural history and was only a few yards away from the famous Sheldonian theater, an earlier work of Wren. The original meetings of the Royal society, of which Sir Christopher Wren was at one time the president, were also held here.—Scientific American.

POLAND CHINAS

Sale Will be Held on Irvin Millar Farm in Madison Township.

October 16, 1923, has been set by the Poland China Breeders' association of Pickaway county as the date for their second annual sale. Last year these breeders maintained one of the highest averages in the state for a consignment sale and because of the quality of offerings this year they expect to make an even higher record.

The sale will be held on the farm of Irvin Millar in Madison township, two miles east of Duvall and four and one half miles northeast of Duvall.

Probably the greatest attraction among the various offerings will be Ton Litter belonging to Irvin Millar. This litter which will be recalled, weighed 2500 pounds at the age of 180 days, without carrying the amount of flesh that is generally to be expected in a market hog. They attracted considerable attention at the Ohio State fair, where the mother of the litter was second prize Sr., Yearling.

Probably next in interest among the offerings will be the consignment of C. B. Teegardin & Sons, who will sell a part of their litter that was fourth prize in the Futurity class at the 1923 Ohio State fair, also the boar pig that stood third in the Futurity class.

Other consignments are being made by Perrill Brothers, Madison township; C. M. Beatty, Scioto township; Carl Hurst, Deer Creek township; F. A. Beatty, Muhlenberg township and Wright and Kuhlwein Walnut township.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Hot cat!" exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer. There goes Tarzan.

"Who is Tarzan?" asked the House Detective.

"He is Bosco, who eats 'em alive," laughed the girl. "Tarzy used to climb trees and jump down on lions' backs and beat their brains out with his fist."

"Aw, you read that in a book," scoffed Kelly.

"Go up to the head of the class," replied the girl. "You win the nice leather lavaller. All the same, Kelly, that guy who wrote about Tarzan had to turn out 16 sequels."

"Most of those books were read by women, Kelly. The average woman, married to a 113 pound adding machine operator, who has tonsillitis if he gets his feet wet, sure does get a lot of joy reading about a big, nunky guy who can pull the legs off an elephant with his bare hands."

"She just craves that cave man stuff, if it is in a book. Now and then some woman is boob enough to marry one, but when he fetches her a wallop on the bean for not having dinner ready in time she wishes she had not been so strong for the primitive."

"Primitive men were all right in their day and I guess there is a throw back to our cave woman ancestors, which makes us all have a cave-man complex. But when it comes to living right in the same flat with one of those babies it is well that Mr. Volstead decreed that in this country there was to be water, water everywhere, but not a dram to drink. If you get one of those hairycheested birds with a pint of synthetic gin in him he is liable to break up the furniture with a woman."

PATTERSON HOME SOLD.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Patterson on East Mill street, was sold Monday to Miss Jemima Dungan and her nephew, Grover Yates. The sale was made thru Abernethy & Simkins.

AMUSEMENTS

Fred Niblo has outdone all of his previous efforts in "Strangers of the Night," the screen version of Walter Hackett's stage success, "Captain Applejack" which opened at the Met theater last night. The man who directed "The Three Musketeers" "The Famous Mrs. Fair" and "Blood and Sand" has again turned out a great screen play. Working on the brilliant story of the timid Britisher who becomes a pirate and roams the Spanish Main, he has embellished it with beautiful photography, magnificent settings and a superb cast. The picture is presented by Louis B. Mayer, thru Metro.

ROBERT McKIM AND BARBARA LA MARR in "STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT"

Spectators were thrilled by intense drama and swept into gales of laughter as Matt Moore, in the role of "Captain Applejack," fought thru the mystery of the treasure hidden in his ancestral castle in Cornwall, and swaged and swore aboard his pirate craft. Enid Bennett's blonde loveliness contrasted with Barbara La Marr's dark seductiveness as these two brilliant actresses portrayed the intrigue and romantic adventure of the demure English miss and the beautiful Russian spy. Robert McKim was at his best as the leader of the pirate mutiny and others in the cast who stood out distinctively were Emily Fitzroy, Otto Hoffman, Thomas Rickerts and Mathilde Brundage.

Bess Meredith was responsible for writing the excellent scenario and the memorable photography is credited to Alvin Wyckoff who left the De Mille to do this picture. Robert Ellis was the artist who designed the beautiful sets.

HOTTEST PLACE ON EARTH

Traveler Claims Mercury Reached 123 Degrees While He Was on a Visit to Shikarpur.

Discussing the hottest place on earth, a "Returned Exile" writes: When travelers from the deserts of Sindh, the banks of the Zambesi, and the black blocks of Queensland begin to compare thermometer readings it is probable that none will yield pride of place until the highest figures known to meteorological science have been reached and surpassed.

In India, Jacobabad has an evil reputation, but there the retired Indian Colonel is beaten on his own ground, as I can claim to have spent a fortnight at Shikarpur in June, the hottest month of 1905, one of the worst years on record.

Shikarpur is not many miles from Jacobabad, and, having no garrison, has not acquired similar fame, but is even more sultry, being surrounded by trees which keep off the breeze that might otherwise bring a breath of early morning coolness from the desert.

When I was there the mercury on several occasions touched 123 degrees in the shade, and for more than ten days on end never fell below 100 degrees at any moment of the day or night.

Contrary to popular belief, the most intense heat is not to be found near the equator, and often outside the tropics altogether. The highest reading in my experience—131 degrees—was taken in Manchuria, but that was in a railway carriage between Port Arthur and Harbin, and would not be accepted as "official."

Further north still, at Blagoveshensk in Siberia, where the thermometer in winter falls to 60 degrees below zero, extreme heat is common in the summer, but only for brief periods.

In the southern hemisphere readings of 110 degrees and 115 degrees are frequently reported from western Australia and northern Queensland, Burke and Townsville being notorious in this respect.

But so far as human comfort is concerned the thermometer is a very poor indicator, and the figures are hardly worth arguing about. In the sticky heat of large cities in July it is possible to be almost melted at 90 degrees, while 110 degrees in the dry Sahara is perfectly bearable.

To vary an old saying, "A woman is as cool as she looks, and a man as hot as he feels."

Colors Controlled by Soil.

The colors of vegetation vary in intensity in a direct ratio to the amount of sunlight combined with coolness of temperature, within certain limits. Examples are the intense redness of apples grown in northern climates and the deep colors of Alpine vegetation. But the soil, as well as other influences, has an effect upon plant colors.

Experiments have been made with reference to the question of artificial control of the colors of plants through the introduction of chemicals into the soil in which they grow. In very small quantities such chemicals are absorbed without apparent injury, but the effect upon the colors is slight. Yellow roses appear to become deeper in hue under the influence of aluminum sulphate and potassium sulphate. With the use of these same chemicals the petals of the white carnation show a tendency to develop red streaks, while, when fed with ammonium sulphate, aluminum sulphate, iron citrate and citric acid, scarlet carnations tend to form white streaks.

Swan Attacks Swimmers.

A swimming race for a challenge at Chertsey, England, has been upset and the contest declared void by the judges, owing to the opposition of a swan. The race was in progress when a big male swan dashed across the Thames and singled out for a fierce attack a swimmer with a bald head.

By treading water and waving his arms the man beat the bird off, and the swan then assaulted other swimmers so persistently that people on the bank had to go to their rescue. The swan was resolute as well as angry, and delayed the race so long that it had to be abandoned.

Patience. "Hello, Jud!" saluted a young swan of the Possum Trot region, addressing another of his kind who was humped up on a log by the roadside. "What are you setting there for? Anything the matter?"

"Nope!" was the reply. "Just waiting for Miss Duck Diddle to come along; that's all. I'm going to take her to singing school."

"But, great guns, singing school don't take place till tomorrow night!"

"I know it, but when a feller's in love he don't mind waiting."—Kansas City Star.

The Miracle. A lady who had been wearing a bracelet watch for two years found that the clasp was becoming a trifle weak. So she went to a jeweler to have it fixed. He fixed it. He also wound the watch part of the ornament, adjusted the hands to indicate the proper hour and started the outfit to ticking merrily. The owner observed all this with utmost amazement.

"Dear me," she exclaimed. "Will it run?"

The Real Object. "Are you getting out among your constituents to tell them what they ought to do?"

"Not so much that," answered Senator Sorghum, "as to find out what they are going to do."

BIG CONCLAVE IN COLUMBUS

Scioto Commandery Will Attend in a Body and Take Part in Parade.

Many Thousands of Knights-Templar to March and More Than Fifty Bands Will Take Part—Entertainment for Ladies and Reception.

Scioto commandery, Knights-Templar, will next week join with thousands of other Sir Knights from all over the state of Ohio for the annual convocation. The local commandery will have a band and a prominent place in the parade which takes place on Wednesday, October 10.

Fifty-five commanderies of the state have already signified their intention of participating in the gigantic parade. Formal receptions for state and national dignitaries of the Knights-Templar and other special functions will mark the gathering.

Mt. Vernon and Columbus commanderies will act as hosts to the visiting delegations and representatives of each of the 72 commanderies in the state will be present to take part in the business sessions of the organization which are to be held at the Masonic temple.

On Tuesday, October 9, will begin arriving and registration will be held at the temple. The convention proper is to open the following day with the escorting of the Grand Commander F. O. Schoedinger of Columbus, to the temple from the Deshler where official grand commandery headquarters are to be maintained. This escort will be made by Mt. Vernon and Columbus commanderies and will be participated in by all of the dignitaries of the order.

The mammoth parade in which more than 50 bands are expected to take part and several thousand men will march in full Templar regalia is to be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning at Broad and Fourth streets. The line of march will be north on Fourth to Chestnut street; west to High street; south to Main street; east to Third street, thence south to Mound, where bands, colors, past commanders and marching delegations will mass in separate units and will march north on High street in mass formation past the reviewing stand at the McKinley monument, where they will be reviewed by the grand commandery officials.

The business will be opened by an address of welcome by Governor Donahy for the state, Mayor Thomas for the city and Safety Director John P. McCune for the Columbus Knights-Templar.

Evening entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock Tuesday with a concert at the temple by the Scottish Rite chorus to be followed at 9:15 by a reception by Grand Commander Schoedinger, the officers and ladies of the grand commandery.

Closing session of the grand commandery will be held Thursday morning at 9:30. At 10 o'clock an auto ride for the visiting ladies will be held, concluding at the Ohio penitentiary, where lunch will be served and entertainment will be provided by the inmates.

A special traction car for Knights-Templars and their families will leave the Circleville station for Columbus at 12 o'clock, noon, Wednesday, October 10, and will stop at Ashville to take on passengers.

Tickets may be secured of H. G. Stevenson, Harry Crow and H. B. Weaver at Circleville; Edward H. Wardell, Williamsport; E. L. Smith, Ashville; Herbert Snyder, Kingston; Dr. E. G. Hemeger, Adelphi or John J. Reichelderfer, Laurelville.

Poetry and Prose. "Dancing is the poetry of motion." "Maybe it is," answered Senator Sorghum. "But give me the solid prose of a march upon the Avenue to an old-fashioned patriotic tune."

Daily Thought. "Tis strange what a man may do and a woman still think him an angel."—Thackeray.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

IS A POWERFUL DISINFECTANT

Ozone Many Times Stronger Than Many of the Agents That Are in Common Use.

Ozone is a powerful bactericidal agent, and can be used as a disinfectant in place of sulphur dioxide, formaldehyde or hydrocyanic acid. In fact, it is 160 times as powerful a disinfectant as sulphur dioxide, 37 times as powerful as hydrocyanic acid gas, writes Floyd W. Parsons in the World's Work. As a deodorant it has no superior. In the case of delicate odors, it destroys them, while with stronger odors it acts as a masking agent, due to its action on the olfactory membrane. When high concentrations of ozone are used, even the most powerful odors are destroyed.

As to the effect of low concentrations of ozone on the human body, there is considerable evidence coming to hand which indicates that the ozone is not only harmless, but that its effect on the individual is beneficial. Medical research has developed the fact that when objectionable odors are present in the air people breathe, their respiration is depressed and the result is a deficient oxidation of the blood. Therefore, whether ozone really masks an odor or completely destroys it, the effect is healthful because the individual breathes more freely and fully. In other words, when bad odors are present in the air, there is an involuntary contraction of respiration, of which bodily reaction the individual is entirely unconscious.

RED HAIR IN MEN AND WOMEN

Altogether Charming on the Fair Sex, Says Writer, but Seldom on the Sterner.

An English writer has recorded the following observations about red hair: "With apologies to any male friends of mine (I cannot remember many) who may have been entitled to the name of Rufus, I am bound to say that I never knew any man who would not have looked better with hair of any other color," says Prof. Saintsbury in "A Scrap Book."

"On the other hand, red hair in girls and women is often—I think much more often than not—perfectly charming. Brick-dust red, with no gloss, is ugly enough, no doubt; but then all hair—except a very peculiar kind of black—requires gloss. Every other shade, from the lightest nasturtium to the darkest auburn chestnut, can be beautiful. This Venice knew, and, long before it, the Greeks. The Romans did not like red hair, but the Romans were people of very doubtful taste in many points of esthetics."

Cat Has Many Relations.

The unsuspecting cat has many kinsfolk in the matter of names. Conspicuous among these is the catfish. The naming of the common denizen of fresh water has been explained in more ways than one, and the reader may take his choice. One recognized authority contents himself with the statement that the name, as commonly applied to the fishes of the family Siluridae, is an allusion to the long barbels or feelers about the mouth, which have been regarded as resembling the whiskers of a cat. This explanation is widely accepted, but the other authorities set forth a probable reason for the name in the statement that when a fish of this species is captured and brought to the surface it makes a sound like the purring of a cat. Another offers both the barbels and the purring and throws in the added suggestion that the name was influenced by "some other fancied resemblance to a cat."

They Knew the Witness.

A circuit judge was holding court in a small backwoods town. A local character came up for trial, took the stand in due time and spun his narrative. The judge, something of a wag, charged the jury as follows: "If you believe the defendant's statement, he is guilty. That is all."

The jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. Somewhat surprised, the judge after court asked the foreman why such a verdict was rendered.

"We thought we were following instructions, your honor," exclaimed the foreman. "We know that bird. You couldn't believe him on oath."

Lost His Opportunity.

I was strolling along with my sweetheart at a fair, very happy, until I discovered her former beau showering honeyed smiles on her. As she didn't ignore him, I became worried, and resolved to propose at once. While deciding just how I absent-mindedly gazed at the sky and allowed her to lead the way. Finally I implored her to be my own little "dove." "I'm afraid I'd be a hungry dove," she answered; "I've led you to three ice cream stands and two lunch counters, but you just gazed at the sky, so I'm going back to Jim."—Chicago Journal.

First Punctuation Marks.

In the oldest manuscripts the words usually join each other without break or separation. Manuscripts without punctuation marks of any kind generally are accepted as predating the Eighth century. Those which have no capital or other divisions are always very old, and the fewer and easier the abbreviations, the older it is. The most ancient manuscripts still preserved are those written in Egyptian tombs. Next to them in point of age are the Latin manuscripts found at Herculaneum.

Course of Hudson River. The Hudson river rises in the hills to the west of Lake Champlain and after a southerly course of about 200 miles falls into the Atlantic ocean below the city of New York. It is navigable as far as Troy, 166 miles above New York, and is connected by canals with Lakes Champlain and Erie.

Woman Started First Daily Paper. The first daily paper in the world is said to have been established by a woman, Miss Elizabeth Mallet, in London, March, 1702. She polished and edited the Daily Courant, which she founded "for the purpose of doing greater justice to women in general through the elimination of imperfections which the ordinary papers contain."

Odd Kind of Fish.
No fish is stranger than the little sea-horse. It has a body encased in rings of bony mail, a horse-shaped head set at right angles and a prehensile tail to grasp seaweed in which it hides. It always floats with its queer head up and erect. Another peculiar thing about the sea-horse is that the male fish carries the eggs in a pouch situated under his tail until the young are hatched and large enough to look out for themselves.

WASTED FORMULA
By H. IRVING KING
(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
BETH CURTIS was a stenographer in a big insurance office. In spite of her good looks, she knew stenography and typewriting thoroughly and had laid up for a rainy day a few hundred dollars in the bank and a store of common sense and resourcefulness. And she was twenty-one.

Harry Parkman was clerk in the same office; was twenty-seven, a hard worker and a competent all-around man at his business. He was gifted with persistence and staying qualities which were admirable. He went at things systematically.

That was the method he used in building up his intimacy, which had now so far progressed that he called at her boarding house every Thursday night and took her out to dinner or to the theater once every fortnight. Had they been living in a country town everybody would have said they were "keeping company." As they lived in the big city, and were both reticent as to their personal affairs, nobody knew anything about it except the people in the boarding house and they did not care a hang. In the office they were always Miss Curtis and Mr. Parkman to each other.

Harry intended marriage and so did Beth; but Harry, somehow, kept putting off "popping the question." A dozen times he had concocted in his mind a formula of avowal and rehearsed it mentally as he approached Beth's boarding house. Then he would become dissatisfied with it as not quite coming up to the high standard which the occasion demanded and he would put it off until next week, by which time he hoped to think up something more worthy. Beth knew he was going to propose some day and she knew, also, that by artfully and skillfully giving him a "jolt," she could make him propose any time she wanted to. But then the situation was very pleasant as it was—why hurry matters? In another year's time they would both be better equipped financially to enter the married state.

The head of the insurance office which employed Harry and Beth was Horace McPherson—large, portly, florid, fifty-five years old and with whitening hair; wealthy, of course. For five years he had been a widower. For the past year an important part of Beth's work consisted in taking dictation from Mr. McPherson. He had been gruff with her at first, then paternal and at last almost gallant—nothing disrespectful. Horace McPherson was a gentleman; he was getting into the Indian summer of his years, that was all. Harry felt annoyed naturally, but he had every confidence in Beth and no fear that the wealth of a whole clan of McPhersons would dazzle the true-blue eyes of his Beth.

When old Horace began to use sulphur and sage on his hair and his waistcoats and cravats began to show a youthful and hilarious disposition everybody felt that a crisis was approaching. Then one day the approaching crisis arrived. When Beth went into the "chief's" office and seated herself demurely with her pencil and notebook to take dictation Horace said:

"Before we begin dictating, Miss Curtis, I have something to say which I hope will not be entirely displeasing or entirely unexpected to you," and then he went on to state his case in a very manly and straightforward manner.

Beth answered him as frankly and they had a rather long talk with each other of the "heart to heart" variety before she came sailing out of the private office as cool, calm and collected as if she had done nothing but take notes for the last three-quarters of an hour.

That was on Thursday and Thursday night was Harry's night for calling. Harry had prepared a proposing formula which he was determined to put into operation that night or perish in the attempt.

As they sat in a corner of the boarding-house parlor he had actually got off the first two carefully prepared and well-polished lines of the proposal when Beth interrupted him with, "Oh, Harry, I had a proposal of marriage today."

"Who from?" growled Harry, "old Horace?"

"Yes, old Horace—Mr. McPherson," replied Beth, "and he is an old dear."

"Glad you think so," said Harry glumly. "What did you say to it?"

"Oh," replied Beth, looking down, "I told him I was already engaged."

"Already engaged," gasped Harry. "To whom, pray?"

"Why, to you, of course," said Beth. Harry's formula vanished into the limbo of proposals that were never made, questions that were never popped, and right there in the boarding-house parlor he took Beth in his arms and kissed her.

The next morning the "chief" sent for Harry. "Understand," said he, "that you and Miss Curtis are engaged to be married."

"We are, sir," replied Harry defiantly.

"I congratulate you," said Horace. Mr. Stiness is retiring at the end of the month. I shall make you chief clerk in his stead. Good-day."

Doing Better.
"Have you always been a tramp?"
"No, mum. I was wunst much worse off than I am now. I started life as a poet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

New Idea in Electric Sifter.
A manufacturer of a successful electric sifter, which has been used as a sand riddle on the molding floor of foundries and for similar purposes, has developed this idea in making a device that sifts out material suspended in liquids. The machine is wholly inclosed except for the half-closed top which prevents the liquor from splashing over.

After Thinking Twice.
Father was standing before the fire lecturing his son and heir on the necessity for thinking twice before speaking once.
"Father!" exclaimed the boy suddenly.
The parent held up a warning finger. "Think again before you speak and then I will answer you."
The boy pondered for a minute or so and then said: "Father, I have thought twice and now I am quite convinced that your coat tails are on fire."—Boston Herald.

Still Same Age.
When mother introduced Dorothy to the caller, she said: "My little girl was five years old yesterday."
"And I am five years old today, too," said Dorothy.—Boston Transcript.

Bible Thought for Today
RICHES DO NOT SATISFY.—He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them; and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?—Eccles. 5:10, 11.

If Italy and Greece jump at each other's throats when they get mad, and forget that they belong to the League of Nations, what would England and France do if they came to a breaking point? The people of America know what they were doing when, by a margin of 7,000,000, they voted against the league in 1920.

It was probably only a coincidence, but when the four convicts escaped from the penitentiary the other day they headed east in Columbus, in the direction of the executive mansion, where four of their "pals" are quartered.

It is a shame about the Third party splitting. For a time it promised to provide a rough house for all political malcontents who wanted a home.

Governor Donahey likes to call his gravel road policy a "progressive policy." Well, a pig sty by any other name would smell the same.

Senator Brookhart says Russia is coming back. When she arrives it might tell the world something about the temperature of hell.

Thankful for Typewriter.
We wonder how how folks ever got along without an instrument which produces legible manuscript. It may in time reduce the knowledge of chirography to the mere matter of penning one's own name, but how much time it has saved already from deciphering illegible writing is beyond computation. The typewriter makes for speed, but the greatest boon it conferred has been in removing the need for the scrawl with the pen.
While many of the present-day utilities which are indispensable have had their development in the last half century, for those whose job it is to make records or grind out "copy" none is entitled to a higher rank than the typewriter, which produces that which may be read easily. And from those on whom falls the duty of reading what others have written, blessings are showered on those who have brought the typewriter into such general use.—Exchange.

Heirs to Peerages.
Some four hundred British peerages are extinct, of which 120 have lapsed since 1900. Five went last year through the demise without successors of Lords Ludlow, Bryce, Northcliffe, Breadalbane and Lindley. This year there are four so far, being the baronies of Seaforth, Weardale, Sanderson and Roe. Sometimes peerages are revived which were long dormant. The longest abeyance was 547 years, in the case of the barony of Strabolgi, terminated in 1916 in favor of the petitioner, Mr. C. M. Kenworthy. No doubt there are in Canada heirs to some of these dormant peerages, because proof is a costly process, and very difficult.

FINALLY SHE GOT TO IT

But Woman on Phone Had Many Important Things to Tell the Fire Station First.

"Halloa!" shouted the fireman on the telephone.

"Halloa!" came back in feminine tones. "Is this the fire station?"

"Yes; what is it?"

"Well, I want to inform you that my garden runs right up to the walk that runs along the side of the Browns' walk next door—"

"You've got the wrong number, ma'am," said the fireman.

"You said this was the fire station, didn't you?"

"Yes; but—"

"Well, I'm trying hard to raise a respectable lawn, and have lately planted grass seed as far as the Browns' walk. Then, besides the grass seed, I had it tidied up and made ready for planting bulbs, and—"

"I say, ma'am, you are mistaken in the telephone number," insisted the fireman. "This—"

"Isn't this the fire station?"

"It is; but—"

"Very well. Now, I want to say further that, however careless our neighbors are with their garden, we are very much the other way. In fact, a pretty lawn, adorned with a variety of flowers, is what I and my husband are looking for next season," said the lady.

"For heaven's sake, ma'am, what has this to do with the fire station?"

"Oh, well, our house is No. 200 School street, and the Browns' house next door is on fire. Now, don't let your firemen trample—"

But the fireman had dropped the receiver.

TURN WARSHIPS INTO RAZORS

New Salvage Has Been Discovered for Cast-Off Warships That Are to Be Broken Up.

It was the immortal Jerry Simpson who said, "What do we want a navy for; to plow corn with?" Jerry's question might be answered now: "No, but to shave with."

The Orion, one of the older British dreadnaughts, is being broken up in an English shipyard, and the best of its steel is to be used for making safety razor blades, observes the Wichita Eagle.

There ought to be a good many first-class shaves in a dreadnaught. Even such a submarine as Great Britain is about to put into commission, mounting a 13.5-inch gun, ought to keep a household in razor blades for quite some time. This kind of ship costs approximately $6,000,000; the battle-ships about six or seven times that amount. For ten years they may serve to keep their nation's flag afloat with due honor, but then they begin to get a little out of date and must be turned into safety razor blades.

Henceforth we shall not consider money expended upon a big warship altogether lost, even if we never get a chance to use that ship to sink other ships. We always can salvage a million good shaves out of a $30,000,000 warship.

IN THE BACK PARLOR

Pa—What was that noise? Sounded like something parting.

Ma—Anabel's young man tearing himself away, I think.

Thoroughly Joined.

A bridal couple set out on their honeymoon from a New Jersey town with the bridegroom's left hand shackled to the right hand of the bride. The key to the handcuffs was in the groom's pocket. The happy couple were afraid that some of their jocular friends might try to separate them after the wedding. It is considered a good joke in the town to start the bride away on a north-bound train and the groom on one south-bound.

Electric Light Angling.

An experiment is being made in Norwegian waters to catch fish with the aid of electric light. There is a quantity of brisling in Hardanger fjord, but they lie at a depth too great for them to be caught in nets. An attempt was made to attract them to the surface by means of electric light shining from the deck of a steamer. Already a certain amount of success has been attained.

URGES ALL TO PRESERVE PEACE

Opponents Ignore Oklahoma Governor's Call For a Special Election Dec. 6 on Initiative Petition No. 79. Statewide Election Being Held in Defiance of the Chief's Executive's Order—Day's Developments.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 2.—Governor J. C. Walton issued a call for a special election Dec. 6, on initiative petition No. 79, which, if passed, would empower the state legislature to assemble itself for the purpose of instituting impeachment proceedings against the chief executive.

"I was challenged to leave this measure to the tribunal of the people," the governor said in explaining his sudden announcement of the call. "I accept that challenge and fix the date as Dec. 6."

Despite this maneuver of the governor, leaders of the anti-Walton group announced they would ignore the call. "He accepts the challenge," said W. D. McBee, "too late. He can meet it today, not 60 days from now. Walton is whipped and he knows it."

It is therefore certain that the statewide special election on No. 79 and the other five referendum amendments will be held in defiance of the governor's order of postponement and threat of arms and his latest call for the initiative election Dec. 6.

Governor Walton, visibly apprehensive of public order, issued the following proclamation, addressed to the people of the state of Oklahoma and all peace officers of the state: "It has come to my notice that a rumor is being circulated that I will interfere by means of the military to prevent or obstruct the pretended election advertised to take place today. This is to advise you that the military forces will not intervene in this pretended election, and I hereby request all citizens of this state to preserve peace and good order."

There are five constitutional referendum amendments to be voted on, as well as No. 79. They are: An employee's compensation act; a $55,000, 000 soldier's bonus for farm and home aid; a 3 1/2 ad valorem tax limitation act; a bank depositors' guaranty fund act; and an act providing that no high state official shall be eligible to office unless for three years previous a qualified elector of the state.

The foregoing five proposition are Governor Walton's pet measures. It was when his opponents ran in petition No. 79 as a rider, intended to oust him as governor, that he revoked the election call he had issued.

In the election itself "petition No. 79" stands out as the vital question. If No. 79 carries, the anti-Waltonites will claim a triumph and the downfall of the governor himself, for the initiative petition is aimed to give the legislature power to assemble itself. Once assembled, impeachment proceedings will be instituted against Walton at once, and there is scarcely a political observer in the state, including the governor's friends, who does not acknowledge that a meeting of the legislature is tantamount to impeachment.

However, the tangle would not end there, in the opinion of a great many persons conversant with state affairs. Governor Walton, already declaring the election invalid, would not recognize the right of the legislature to meet, would attempt to disperse it and would refuse to surrender his office under such an impeachment, it is reliably reported.

TAFT ACT FIRST

Form of Ohio's Official Ballot Goes to the Printer.

Columbus, Oct. 2.—Secretary of State Brown has sent to the printer the form of official ballot to be submitted to the voters at the November election, bearing the three laws that are to be voted on, as well as the three proposed constitutional amendments. The Taft law referendum will have first place on the separate ballot on which the three laws are to be printed. The Albaugh referendum will have second place and the initiated old age pension law will be third. The workmen's compensation amendment will have first place on a separate ballot, the "white male" elimination proposal second, and the amendment covering the publication of proposed amendments or referenda on laws, in daily newspapers, third.

EASY FOR CARPENTIER

Joe Beckett Knocked Out in the First Round.

London, Oct. 2.—Joe Beckett was knocked out by Georges Carpentier last night in the first round inside of 15 seconds. Beckett now holds the world's record for quick loss of a big championship fight.

When the gong rang for the opening round Beckett led with his left to Carpentier's jaw. Georges crouched and then, springing like a panther, shot over a left, followed by a terrific right to the point of Beckett's jaw. The British champion went down for the count of seven, and as he rose, groggy, Georges shot in another heavy right to the jaw. Beckett fell like a log to his back. When the referee had counted five the Englishman's seconds threw in a towel, as there was no chance of Beckett's being able to continue the fight.

Then pandemonium broke loose. Hundreds of men and women in evening dress led many thousands of boxing fans who packed the Olympia in booing the "hope of Britain."

Carpentier received $45,000 for his 15 seconds of work, while Beckett was paid $15,000 for winning the new quick losing record.

HARDING PLAN MAY BE UPSET

Coolidge's Advisers Rap Restrictive Rail Legislation.

FULL OF DYNAMITE, THEY SAY

Declare There Will Be a Lot Said on the Transportation Act During the Next Session of Congress, but That Nothing Will Be Done Toward Changing the Present Law—Would Leave Railroads Alone.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Indications are multiplying at the white house that President Coolidge is being advised against recommending to congress the proposed regulatory and restrictive railroad legislation.

This information does not come from representatives of the railway executives, who are fighting to uphold the present transportation act, which guarantees a 5 1/2 per cent return on railroad investments. Some of the president's own party advisers and officials within the administration are telling him the railroad question is full of dynamite and had best be left alone. Hardly a day passes that the future of the railroads is not a subject of conference at the executive offices.

President Harding on his fateful speaking trip across the country advocated these things: Compulsory consolidation of the railroads; a clause in the transportation act to put teeth in the decisions of the railroad labor board, and withdrawal of the federal guarantee of financial support to the railroads, at least in the form the support is given under the existing law.

The advice that is being given President Coolidge by party and administration counselors, as ascertained from more than one of his recent callers, is that the transportation act is still in an experimental stage and that in the two years it has been in operation economic conditions have not been such as to give it a fair trial. They argue that the country was in the midst of the panic of 1921 when the Esch-Cummings act was passed, followed by the coal and rail strikes of 1922, all of which had a direct and adverse effect on railroad operations and earnings.

Chairman Hooper of the railroad labor board and others of the president's advisers contend that the railroads should be left alone for a reasonable time under the present more favorable business and financial conditions before there is any tampering with the existing legislation. To undertake a revision of the transportation act at the coming session of congress, they assert, would be to invite a general business depression.

Nevertheless it appears certain that a number of amendments to the transportation act will be offered when congress assembles. But their fate is another matter. One of the president's close advisers summed up the situation with the flat prediction that there would be a lot said on the subject, but in the final analysis congress would do nothing toward changing the present law.

Owner of "My Own" Wants Mile and a Half Race With Zev.

Washington, Oct. 2.—Admiral Cary T. Grayson rejected the offer of Sam Hildreth to race Zev against the Admiral's My Own over a mile and a half course. Grayson's challenge for a match race at a mile and a half, the distance over which the international race with Papyrus is to be run, still stands. "Neither horse has any assurance that Papyrus would wait for him after a mile and an eighth," Grayson declared in a telegram to August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey club.

The whole affair is now up in the air again and racing circles are rife with speculation whether or not the pair of stars will meet. In case they do not, the committee must make the selection of the American entry on Saturday, as required in the conditions for the race, basing its choice on what both horses have shown.

PLAN FOSTERED BY ASHURST

Would Change Time for Convening of New Congress.

ALSO DATE OF INAUGURATION

Arizona Senator Announces He Is at Work on Two Amendments to the Federal Constitution Which Will Be Introduced at Next Session—Alleged Disadvantages of the Existing System Pointed Out.

Washington, Oct. 2.—The much discussed proposal of changing the time for a newly elected congress to assemble, as well as changing the date of the president's inauguration, will be brought again before congress as soon as the December session opens.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, announced that he is at work on two amendments to the constitution which will be introduced by him to effect these changes.

Under one amendment congress will be asked to assemble at least once each year, the session to begin the first Monday in January. The terms of senators and representatives will be changed to begin on that date. Short sessions would be done away with.

The other amendment will designate the third Monday in January as the day of the president's inauguration. This change would enable congress to be in session long enough to canvass the vote cast for presidential and vice-presidential electors and announce the result before the day set for their inauguration.

The purpose in Senator Ashurst's mind in suggesting these changes is to make it impossible for senators or representatives to act upon legislation after they have been defeated in November election.

The disadvantages of the existing system were illustrated after the general election of 1922. In that contest thirteen senators and more than a hundred members of the house were retired, among them being some of the most important leaders, including Republican leader Mondell of the house and Chairman McCumber of the senate finance committee.

Notwithstanding their retirement, however, the existing law permitted these defeated members to return to their seats and vote on legislation in regard to which they were completely out of sympathy with their electorate. An effort to effect a change was made when the senate passed the Norris resolution to change the date of the inauguration and the time for congressional sessions to begin. This measure did not reach a vote in the house.

Senator Ashurst believes there is imperative need for the change. He believes that by bringing the new congress into power two months after it has been chosen it will more certainly reflect the views of the people on legislative questions. Moreover, it would end the practice of permitting a legislator to exercise his vote after the people had repudiated him at the polls.

WEBB HEARD

Tells the District Attorney the Story of His Married Life.

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 2.—"This case is going to be more sensational than the Ward case," said Coroner Edward F. Fitzgerald after a long conference with District Attorney Arthur Rowland on the death of wealthy Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, who, it is believed, was poisoned.

A short time afterwards Charles H. Webb, husband of the dead woman, arrived here to tell the district attorney the story of his married life. Webb was accompanied by counsel. The district attorney explained that no summons has been issued, but that Webb had been invited to his office and had agreed to tell his story.

Coroner Fitzgerald was notified by Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, toxicologist, that there were indications of poison in the viscera of Mrs. Webb. He was not able to state, however, whether there was enough poison to have caused death. "I have certain indications of an irritant poison," said Dr. Goettler and I am following the lead."

Duesseldorf, Oct. 2.—The French military proclaimed a state of siege for Duesseldorf, but the city wears a normal aspect. The French report Sunday's casualties at ten killed and 200 wounded, when the crowds attending the meeting of the Rhineland separatists was fired on in the streets.

TO HALT CORN BORER

Extension of Federal Quarantine Against the Pest Announced.

Columbus, Oct. 2.—The horticultural board of the federal department of agriculture has announced the extension of federal quarantine against the European corn borer to include additional cities and towns in Ohio, New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan. As the pest gradually spreads to new fields, the area under quarantine is widened. The new territory becomes subject to the quarantine regulations aimed to keep the pest in check. Cities and towns in Cuyahoga, Geauga, Ashtabula, Erie, Huron, Lorain, Lucas, Ottawa, Sandusky and Wood counties are to be placed under regulations to keep the pest in check.

SELFISH INTERESTS ACCUSED BY LABOR

Public Schools Used for Propaganda Purposes, it is Charged.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 2.—Among the important problems which have been taken up by the American Federation of Labor and the consideration of which will be one of the tasks of the convention is the proper elucidation of children in studies.

Following the keynote speech of President Samuel Gompers, in which he demanded legislation for the protection of children, the report of the American Federation of Labor committee on education was made public. The report was prepared by a special committee appointed to investigate the selection or preparing and publishing of text books prepared for classes of workers.

The report states that charges have been reiterated that social and economic studies as taught in public schools are "lacking in that broad inclusive vision that reflects the common life." The report purports to present facts on social studies in public schools indicating what is wrong with text books and instruction.

"In recent years there have been well authenticated reports that selfish interests are seeking to use the public schools for propaganda purposes and are undermining the dignity and independence of the teaching profession," the report says. "Such actions strike at the very heart of successful democracy and tend to tear down the usefulness of the structure of public education, which the members of organized labor, in common with other public spirited citizens, have striven to build up. A manifestation of the attempt to restrict public school teaching, which is both menacing and undeniable, is the array of scattered cases throughout the country where teachers or other educational authorities have actually been dismissed or suspended for holding views distasteful to industrial and financial groups, or even for joining teachers' unions."

MILADY CHOOSES STYLES TO SUIT

Will Be Women's Fault if They Fail to Select Proper and Becoming Clothes.

The American woman looks to the designers of her own land for her best expression in clothes, and this season much has been done to please the smartly dressed woman, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. The designers say we no longer must be extremely young in our appearance, neither must we make any effort to be too noticeably dignified. We are to be allowed, it seems, to choose our own styles from among so many models and designs that it will be our own fault if we should fail to find just the proper and most becoming thing.

Among the many creations we find high lights. They are important in that they go to make up the fashion, but none of them is so startling as to constitute a complete change. The gowns as they appear to the casual eye are still straight and rather long. But the straightness is made up of more fullness of material than has been the case in the past. The length is a static thing that stays where it was through the last season, and, in some cases, is shorter by some inches. The tailored suits of tweed, for instance, will be quite short, and as the skirts are tight they are often slit at the left side, so that the leg appears when walking almost up to the knee.

One designer goes so far as to believe that American women eventually will wear bloomers, instead of petticoats, under all of their daytime dresses. She is making models of printed crepe, of white broadcloth, of rajah silks—in fact, of any fabric that is used for wear during the daytime.

The skirts open at one side all the way to the waistline. They button at the hem with three buttons. They can be left closed or swing open and loose. And the bloomers underneath, made of the same material, serve to complete that dress.

Sleeves Large and Flowing.

Sleeves are still large and flowing in many of the costumes. They are trimmed gorgeously. In some of the suits and dresses they hold the center of interest, pushing all other features of the design aside. As the skirts grow wider and are trimmed with flouncings and panelings, the sleeves sink into a secondary place, and then, in their humility, are made short and tight and with no trimming whatsoever.

Draped dresses are the order of the day. The silk or crepe or the light woolen material is taken in hand by the clever designer and the folds are swirled and swooped about the figure until there results a frock that is simply a series of beautifully conceived lines put together in a miraculous way. For these dresses there is little or no trimming. If there is a girdle or a buckle or a bow to finish off the ending of their folds, these decorations are done in colors and shapes that harmonize splendidly with the general design of the frock itself.

Evening frocks are in two distinct classes. One of these is the draped class, and the materials used in making are crepe and satin and moire, the latter being the newest thing upon the horizon. Then there are the frocks with full skirts and tight little bodices. They are made from tulle or many layers of chiffon and they are particularly quaint in their designs, suited to the more youthful types of figure, which can afford to carry about layers of fullness and many bows with dripping ribbon trimmings.

Printed Dress Is Featured.

The printed dress is one of the features for spring. One sees it everywhere. There is no end to the patterns and designs and the combinations of color that are represented by the frocks of printed silk. They are made, usually, over the plainest of models. But they certainly are becoming and beautiful in the extreme, and every woman is likely to decide upon having at least one of them. When the whole dress is not made of the printed material, then half of it manages to show a pattern, and the lower part of the dress is made of a woolen material or a plain silk or something that contrasts with the pattern of the silk above. There are printed silks and printed chiffons, all of them most interesting when made up in the plain little frocks which will be popular all through the spring and summer seasons.

Dresses for the street are made of the softest of woolen materials, some in kasha cloth, some in lightweight velours and others in wool crepes. One of the newest outlines is the skirt with three tiers. These flounces are made over a circular pattern, a skirt that is particularly becoming to the slim and youthful figure. The dress of this character has trimmings of black around the edges and the frock itself is made of a light shade of tan. After the black has been applied along the edges there ensues an interval of black and white striped ribbon that helps to accentuate the decoration.

Wraps for the spring are made along large and ample lines. There is, first of all, the straight coat, which ties on the side with a bow of ribbon and usually has a huge bow of satin ribbon to tie the coat together on one side. There is a fur collar, too, and a straight line to the coat which carries out the idea of the silhouette of the season. Some of these coats are embroidered in all-over designs and there is no portion of the coat which is left without that embroidered ornamentation. Even the collars are embroidered and made so wide that they fold about the throat in a graceful manner.

Short Coats Are Draped.

There are short, graceful and draped coats which will be a strong feature of the early spring styles and they promise to carry over into the summer. A short coat can be made of almost any material. It may be embroidered, made of some brightly colored fabric, or it can have the same tone as the skirt; made of another sort of material. The fact is that there is so much chance with these little bloused jackets to create differing and unusual effects that they have been pounced upon by the smart women and worn so that they display the foremost elements of fashion.

Light-colored short coats will be worn with white skirts or lighter-toned dresses. And the dark coats covered with embroidery will be worn with the darker toned silk dresses during the early spring to demonstrate the fashion as it exists at present.

There are some straight box coats to be seen and these are made of the same materials that go to make up the shorter boxline coats. Then we are working our way slowly toward a three-quarter coat which will be popular about the middle of the summer.

Many of the three-piece suits are made with short coats that come to a long waistline and end there, showing a skirt that is made of the same material and a bodice or a top to the skirt that is made of some brilliantly contrasting material.

Many of the three-piece suits show coats that are exaggerated in their shortness, but others are displaying coats longer and more conservative in line. If a woman is at all large about the hips she does not want to indulge too strenuously in the coat that spans across the hips, but she can well afford to adhere to the coat that is of three-quarter length and without a belt or anything to accentuate the hip line or the waist. Many of the costume suits are made on this general plan and they are really the most satisfactory things that the American designers have produced. They show a surface that is dark in color or light in tone with the same shade running all the way from the shoulders to the heels, and then they have blouses or bodices, as the case may be, that are brilliant and altogether charming in their coloring. When the coat swings apart in the front, as it always does in the springtime, the blouse underneath plays a large part in the design of the costume as a whole.

This vogue for the costume suit has brought the blouse into much greater prominence than it has held for some time past.

STATE TAX LEVIES' REPEAL IS EFFECTIVE

Last Measure Republican Governor Signed Provides New School Funds.

Columbus, O.—The first bill passed by the present Ohio general assembly is one of the last to become effective. It went into effect under special provision in the act itself. The measure was introduced by Representative Dunn of Wood county, Republican floor leader in the house, on Jan. 2, the second day of the session, and repeals all direct state tax levies for highways and weak school districts. The bill passed both houses the day it was introduced and was the last legislative measure signed by Governor Harry L. Davis, his approval being given four days before the inauguration of Vic Donahey as governor. Davis recommended the repeal of the state levies and that the need for highways and weak school districts be met with appropriations from the general fund.

The Davis administration held the surplus created through savings in operating expenses due to the reorganization of the state government was sufficient to warrant a reduction in taxes through the repeal of state levies.

The Dunn tax repealing act provides that for the purpose of affording the advantages of free education to all youth of the state there shall be levied annually a tax of 2.65 mills, the proceeds of which are to be retained by the respective counties for the support of the schools therein. To meet the needs of weak school districts, the new law provides for an educational equalization fund to consist of such sums as the general assembly may appropriate from the general revenue fund.

Some Yarn, Eh?

"Several years ago," said Blinks, "I raised some watermelons which grew to an enormous size. One day a three-masted schooner went aground on the mud flats just below my house. I immediately rolled one of these huge melons to the side of the stranded craft, cut the melon in two and enough juice came out of it to float the schooner safely into deep water."—New York Globe.

HARTMAN THEATER

A play that has been running in England for more than two years and is now in its second year in Dublin, Ireland, is to be seen at the Hartman theater Columbus the week beginning Monday night, October 1. It is "The Irish Jew" from the pen of John MacDonagh and it has been given a special production for this country. Morris Waxman has the titular role and it gives this fine actor a character which he is eminently well fitted to portray. Supporting him is a cast which was selected with special care and which is an excellent one in all particulars.

On the other side of the Atlantic people vied with each other in registering the greatest number of attendances, which is explained in that the play delighting at first sight, is of such a character as to make one wish to see it again and again.

At the first rehearsal in New York stage hands sat quietly for the first few minutes and then began to laugh and continued to laugh to such an extent that they cried. It is a tradition of the theater that if a play makes the stage hands laugh its success is assured.

Charles O'Brien Kennedy, for many years with Arthur Hopkins enterprises has given "The Irish Jew" a splendid production. A more capable director was hard to find and he has made of the present play a genuine success.

The Hartman engagement includes matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders should be sent at once to the Hartman box office in order to insure obtaining good reservations, it is urged.

By means of a light outrigger constructed of pipe, a French inventor has made it possible to make use of a bicycle on railroad tracks. The bicycle is held on one rail, while the end of the outrigger rests on the other, and all the rider has to do is work his legs and incidentally to look out for trains which may happen to come from either direction.

Baldheads, Rejoice!
Successful experiments have been made in a new method for planting hair upon bald heads. It has been found that baldness never affects certain parts of the back of the head. Long thin strips of hair-covered skin cut from these parts may be grafted upon the bald area to form furrows. These fertile parts, when brushed, entirely cover the bald lines.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TEXAS MAN BREEDS QUEEN BEES FOR EVERY MARKET

By Use of Artificial Means He Fools the Bees and Reaps Income of $50,000 a Year.

Raising and selling queen bees bring to E. B. Ault an annual revenue of more than $50,000, and most of this is profit. Mr. Ault's queen bee farm is near Calallen, Tex., and is in its twelfth year of successful operation. He ships the queen bees all over the United States and to foreign lands, including Australia, Japan and countries of Europe and South America. He also ships many colonies of working bees.

Breeding queen bees is done partly by artificial means. There would be no money in the industry if the natural breeding method of the bees were depended on for queens. It is explained. It was discovered that the working bees, like carpenters, performed their work according to the plans and specifications of the architect; so Mr. Ault began building large cells for queens in the artificial wax comb foundation. These queen cells are then filled and produce queens, according to the foundation specifications.

As a result of this artificial method Mr. Ault obtains about 100 queens from every hive of 2,000 to 3,000 working bees. Instead of only one queen. The bees are fooled, but they do not seem to mind it.

Queen bees vary in price. When the demand is slow they sell for as low as $1, but ordinarily they bring $2.50 to $2.75 each. Just now there is an extraordinarily good demand for them and the price is on the upward trend.

MISS FLORENCE A. YATES, AMERICA'S NEWEST HEIRESS

Miss Florence Argall Yates, fifteen years old, of Beloit, Wis., whose father died leaving her sole heiress to $13,000,000, making her America's newest heiress, but one would never know it to look at her or talk to her for she's just a regular girl. She's not the least bit prudish or "stuck up" and her money doesn't mean any more to her than a comfortable home, a chance to get an education and become a kindergarten teacher, for that's her ambition. Florence doesn't wear elaborate clothes, nor drive her own car as her wealth might easily allow. She would much rather play tennis or take part in some other outdoor sport, and folks about her town who have known her and watched her grow up, say that she's a "chip off the old block."

RING SMALL; WEDDING HALTS

Groom Insists on Full Ceremony, So Change Is Made.

There was an unusual interruption to a wedding ceremony in a north London register office when the bridegroom put the ring on his bride's finger and found it would not go beyond the knuckle. He made several attempts to get the ring on, but without success.

Saying that the jeweler must have mistaken the size, the bridegroom asked the registrar if he could wait till he got it changed. The official said that the ring did not matter, as they had both said the contracting words and were legally married. All that remained was to sign the register.

"Oh, but we must be married properly," replied the bridegroom. "I want my wife to have her ring now and in your presence." The bride agreed, so leaving her in the office, he hurried to the jeweler's and returned with a larger ring.

Found Wrangel Island in 1867.
The first authentic account concerning Wrangel island, which has been attracting so much international interest, was from Captain Long, master of the American whaling barque Nile, who in the summer of 1867 on a whaling voyage, named this land Wrangel land, after Baron Wrangel and two of the headlands he named after one of his crew named Thomas, this man being the first to see the island.

The promontory Hawaii he named after the island, where in winter, in the harbor of Honolulu, the whalers made their rendezvous there to outfit for another season. These names are today on the charts of Wrangel island.

Aug. 12, 1881, Capt. Calvin Cooper, commanding the United States revenue steamship Corwin, landed and took possession of Wrangel land in the name of the United States of America.

Trip Through New Guinea Costly.

New Guinea is a rough country to travel in—absolutely virgin jungle, without even a path other than the knife-cut paths carved out of the wall of vegetation that covers the greater part of the island. And it is a costly thing to travel through the jungle, for everything you are likely to wear, eat and use in the trip must be carried with you on the backs of your native porters; the jungle is innocent of even the poorest sort of store or shop. Man transport is expensive, too, and a moderate estimate for the cost of a tour inland by two white men and thirty native carriers is not less than $600 a month. The lonely white man can travel in most countries; in New Guinea he is unknown. Arctic exploration is not more strenuous than a journey through the interior of New Guinea.—Adventure Magazine.

South Rhodesia Granted Right of Self-Government.

GOVERNED BY CORPORATION

South Rhodesia, to which Great Britain has just granted the right of self-government, was expected to be a second Rand, but has turned out a South African Kansas, observes a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"At present South Rhodesia has a government like none other in the world. It discloses the only instance where a great corporation, the British South Africa company, governs a vast and populous country in which a considerable white population is actively engaged in business, politics and farming. Hitherto and elsewhere that form of government has been reserved for native, and usually backward, peoples.

"The country's future status came up automatically at this time under the charter granted by Victoria at the behest of Cecil Rhodes, which charter provided that at the end of 25 years, or at the end of any subsequent ten-year period, it might be renewed, altered or annulled. The quarter century expired in 1914, when it was reaffirmed. Discussions about action to be taken in 1924 brought the announcement that the country is to join the family of British states.

"It is hard to realize how far South Africa has emerged from a 'dark continent' status; and South Rhodesia's rise has been kaleidoscopic. Should an airplane land you today at its metropolis Bulawayo, you might be invited to lecture about your trip before a group of gentlemen in evening dress. You would find the conveniences of a modern hotel in Bulawayo's big hotel.

"Pain in Head! Cut Off a Head! "Stroll down a broad, paved, electric-lighted street, however, and you would encounter many natives, peaceable and nearly nude. Less than fifty years ago the blood-thirsty Lobengula held sway over the war-like Matabeles. This crochety chief had an idea that a pain could be cured by the sacrifice of a head from any chance passerby.

"With the finesse of a William Penn, Cecil Rhodes bought the mining rights to Lobengula's domain for a monthly pension, a thousand rifles and some ammunition. But the empire builder's most famous exploit occurred many years later in this, his namesake colony. After a native outbreak was put down by Lord Plumer and 800 soldiers the tribesmen took to the Matapos mountains. Thither marched Rhodes, with only two companions, unarmed, and camped along the hills until he had interviewed every important chief and concluded a peace. For two months he remained, surrounded by fierce, blood-thirsty savages.

"While in these mountains on that precarious mission Rhodes is said to have selected the site of his world-famous burial place, which he called 'the view of the world.' Between two great boulders is the mountain-top grave with the simple inscription, 'Here Lie the Remains of Cecil John Rhodes.'

"A second grave, that of Dr. Jameson, recalled the occasion when this 'slight, bald, mild little man' led his heroic handful of men against the Matabeles at Bulawayo. There the savage horde made their last stand after a series of forays against settlers. Jameson wired Rhodes for advice and got the laconic reply, 'Read Luke, fourteen, thirty-one.'

"Jameson sent for a missionary Bible and found this injunction, 'Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he may be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand.' Jameson wired back, 'In substance, 'All right I have read it,' and then planted the British flag firmly in Bulawayo and crushed Lobengula's power.

"Everybody knows, in an academic way, of South Rhodesia's great natural spectacle, the Victoria falls. Glibly reciting its dimensions—a mile wide and from 250 to nearly 350 feet high—means little. The imaginative person might stand on Capitol Hill, in Washington, look at the Capitol's dome and try to visualize a sheet of water higher than that dome extending all the way from the capitol, down Pennsylvania avenue, to the White House.

"Bridge Publicity Device. "Even then he would miss the roar audible ten miles away and the feel of the mist which carries almost as far.

"The many-sided Cecil Rhodes had an eye for publicity. It was he who insisted that the bridge should be built near enough to the falls so the spray would wet the cars as trains rolled by. Engineers told him 'no,' as they told Harriman when he proposed his 'wild scheme' of a bridge across Great Salt Lake. Both Rhodes and Harriman had their way.

"But in his hope for South Rhodesia's future Rhodes was mistaken. The colony prospered but not from the mines, as Rhodes expected. Instead farming and grazing lands are the magnets which drew the 33,000 white men to this remote area; enough, even with nearly 800,000 natives, to be given the reins of government."

CREAM MARKET

Farmers Will Maintain Truck Routes All Over the County.

The plans for cooperative marketing of cream in Pickaway county as they were taken up and discussed at the Farm Bureau office on Saturday afternoon, September 29, call for a system of collecting cream by maintaining truck routes over the entire county. Details of this have not yet been worked out, another meeting of committees from all townships has been called for Monday evening, October 8, in the Farm Bureau office.

E. D. Waid, representing the Ohio Farm Bureau federation presented figures to show that cooperative marketing in more than sixty communities of Ohio had resulted in the general price for butter fat being raised to all producers. The success of the Cooperative association according to Mr. Waid depends upon a large volume of cream being handled on business principles. The plan calls for a membership association with signed up contracts and the payment of dividends to the members monthly.

Several meetings are scheduled in different parts of Pickaway county at which the cream marketing association will be more fully explained. One scheduled during the coming week will be in connection with the Washington Grange on Friday evening.

TO IMPROVE ROAD.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held Monday a petition was passed making application to the state highway department for state aid for resurfacing the eastern end of the Cincinnati and Zanesville road known as the Lancaster pike from the present termination of the improvement to the Fairfield county line, a distance of three and a half miles. The improvement will be the same as the western end of the road, bituminous macadam. When this section of the road is completed we will have an improved road running east and west from Fairfield to Fayette county, clear across the county.

Irish Free State Represented.

London, Oct. 2.—The opening speech of Premier Baldwin to the imperial conference was remarkable more for its omissions than for its contents. The premier was silent in his talk to the dominion heads regarding his attitude toward the policy of Premier Poincare, but his remarks did contain a stern reminder to Europe on the necessity of meeting obligations. The outstanding feature of the gathering, in which all met, as the premier declared, "on a footing of perfect equality," was the presence of Irish Free State representatives, to whom the premier extended "cordial welcome on joining our councils."

Luis Firpo Married.

New York, Oct. 2.—Luis Angel Firpo is married. The secret came out when he made application to become an American citizen. He also gave his age as 28, instead of 26, as had been generally reported, and also appeared in pugilistic records, and his birthplace as Junnin, Buenos Aires. His wife is an Argentinian.

How Trustees of Early Yankee Church Solved Problem.

Boston Merchant Made the Mistake of His Life When He Wrote "No Errors Rectified."

In one of the older churches of New Haven there is a quaint and beautiful baptismal service set of silver, and not less quaint is the tale of how the old church came by it.

The year that Yorktown fell the trustees of the church decided that the frame building must have repairs, and sent to Boston for six kegs of nails. In course of time the kegs arrived on one of the huge and slow-moving freight wagons of the day and were duly delivered to the carpenters.

Nails in those days were scarce and expensive, each one being the handwork of a blacksmith, and, as a consequence of the methods followed in their manufacture, the smiths usually turning out a hundred or so on days when they had nothing in particular to engage their attention, they were apt to be very irregular in size and degree of perfection. The delight of the chief carpenter was, therefore, great when, knocking in the head of one keg, he found the nails of remarkably uniform size and indicating the best workmanship and material.

"Ye were in luck, deacon," he remarked to one of the trustees who had been present to give receipt for the six kegs, "for these be Spanish nails, made at Toledo. Belike they were taken from some Spanish ship by a sea rover."

He began to beat in the head of another keg and uttered an exclamation of astonishment.

"These be n't nails, deacon!" he gasped, his eyes staring.

They were not. The keg was full of Spanish silver dollars.

"So I see, Master Thomas," the deacon remarked quietly. "Suppose you head up that keg again, and I will call a meeting of the trustees to discuss this matter. We must write to the Boston merchant concerning it."

The meeting of the trustees was duly held that very day, and long and earnest were the arguments. What was the proper course for them to follow? Should they simply write the Boston merchant that one of the kegs had been found to be full of silver dollars? The church was poor and the deacons were Connecticut Yankees to the bone. It was obvious that the Boston merchant had obtained the keg in some unusual manner and it was a logical assumption that he had paid for it on a nail value basis, as he had sold it.

Then uprose one who might have done mighty things in finance had he lived a century and a half later.

"Let us," he suggested, "write to this merchant of Boston town simply the facts that there was an error in shipment." And so they did.

In time came the merchant's reply. He said that he had bought the kegs from a privateersman; that they were sold as bought, and that "no mistakes could be rectified."

And there is no doubt that the deacons chuckled somewhat dryly as they ordered the silver dollars of Spain melted down and cast into that service which can be pointed out today to the youth of New Haven as an example of—of, well, something.

The Araguaya Whale.

On the third day out, writes Reginald Pound in the July Wide World magazine, we were paddling vigorously along the Araguaya (Brazil) by way of keeping ourselves warm in the chilly morning air, when I was startled by the sound of a short, sharp explosion, like that of a rifle shot, coming from just behind me. Turning round, I spotted what is known as the "Araguaya whale," a big, gray-green fish, measuring seven or eight feet in length, and almost as much in girth. The boto, as it is known, is perfectly harmless and will follow a canoe with the sagacity of a dog, indulging in all sorts of queer aquatic tricks. Occasionally it will take it into its head to dive with reckless abandon into the depths, following which the observer may see hundreds of smaller fish leap into the air in order to escape its violent rush.

New Substitute for Fur.

Certain kinds of fleeces not well adapted to spinning by a newly-invented process can be manufactured into a rich, fur-like material, which is supposed to present a valuable hygienic advantage over skin furs for clothing because the material is mounted on a wool foundation, is reported by Consul General T. W. Sammons, from Australia. The inventor claims that this material has an excellent appearance, that it is suitable for all purposes for which fur is utilized, and for clothing where the utmost warmth, the least weight, and the maximum of protection are demanded.

Wren's Science Museum.

During the recent Wren celebration interest was focussed on St. Paul's and the beautiful London churches designed by him, but attention should be called to the fact that he designed the Old Ashmolean museum at Oxford. This was the first public museum of natural history and was only a few yards away from the famous Sheldonian theater, an earlier work of Wren. The original meetings of the Royal society, of which Sir Christopher Wren was at one time the president, were also held here.—Scientific American.

POLAND CHINAS

Sale Will be Held on Irvin Millar Farm in Madison Township.

October 16, 1923, has been set by the Poland China Breeders' association of Pickaway county as the date for their second annual sale. Last year these breeders maintained one of the highest averages in the state for a consignment sale and because of the quality of offerings this year they expect to make an even higher record.

The sale will be held on the farm of Irvin Millar in Madison township, two miles east of Duval and four and one half miles northeast of Duval.

Probably the greatest attraction among the various offerings will be Ton Litter belonging to Irvin Millar. This litter which will be recalled, weighed 2500 pounds at the age of 180 days, without carrying the amount of flesh that is generally to be expected in a market hog. They attracted considerable attention at the Ohio State fair, where the mother of the litter was second prize Sr., Yearling.

Probably next in interest among the offerings will be the consignment of C. B. Teegardin & Sons, who will sell a part of their litter that was fourth prize in the Futurity class at the 1923 Ohio State fair, also the boar pig that stood third in the Futurity class.

Other consignments are being made by Perrill Brothers, Madison township; C. M. Beatty, Scioto township; Carl Hurst, Deercreek township; F. A. Beatty, Muhlenberg township and Wright and Kuhlwein Walnut township.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Hot cat!" exclaimed the Hotel Stenographer. There goes Tarzan.

"Who is Tarzan?" asked the House Detective.

"He is Bosco, who eats 'em alive," laughed the girl. "Tarzy used to climb trees and jump down on lions' backs and beat their brains out with his fist."

"Aw, you read that in a book," scoffed Kelly.

"Go up to the head of the class," replied the girl. "You win the nice leather valise. All the same, Kelly, that guy who wrote about Tarzan had to turn out 16 sequels."

"Most of those books were read by women, Kelly. The average woman, married to a 113 pound adding machine operator, who has tonsillitis if he gets his feet wet, sure does get a lot of joy reading about a big, husky guy who can pull the legs off an elephant with his bare hands."

"She just craves that cave man stuff, if it is in a book. Now and then some woman is boob enough to marry one, but when he fetches her a wallop on the bean for not having dinner ready in time she wishes she had not been so strong for the primitive."

"Primitive men were all right in their day and I guess there is a throw back to our cave woman ancestors, which makes us all have a cave-man complex. But when it comes to living right in the same flat with one of those babies it is well that Mr. Volstead decreed that in this country there was to be water, water everywhere, but not a dram to drink. If you get one of those hairy-chested birds with a pint of synthetic gin in him he is liable to break up the furniture with a woman."

PATTERSON HOME SOLD.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Patterson on East Mill street, was sold Monday to Miss Jemima Dungan and her nephew, Grover Yates. The sale was made thru Abernethy & Simkins.

AMUSEMENTS

Fred Niblo has outdone all of his previous efforts in "Strangers of the Night," the screen version of Walter Hackett's stage success, "Captain Applejack" which opened at the Met theater last night. The man who directed "The Three Musketeers" "The Fancus Mrs. Fair" and "Blood and Sand" has again turned out a great screen play. Working on the brilliant story of the timid Britisher who becomes a pirate and roams the Spanish Main, he has embellished it with beautiful photography, magnificent settings and a superb cast. The picture is presented by Louis B. Mayer, thru Metro.

ROBERT McKIM AND BARBARA LA MARR in "STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT"

Spectators were thrilled by intense drama and swept into gales of laughter as Matt Moore, in the role of "Captain Applejack," fought thru the mystery of the treasure hidden in his ancestral castle in Cornwall, and swaged and swore aboard his pirate craft. Enid Bennett's blonde loveliness contrasted with Barbara, La Marr's dark seductiveness as these two brilliant actresses portrayed the intrigue and romantic adventure of the demure English miss and the beautiful Russian spy. Robert McKim was at his best as the leader of the pirate mutiny and others in the cast who stood out distinctively were Emily Fitzroy, Otto Hoffman, Thomas Rickerts and Mathilde Brundage.

Bess Meredith was responsible for writing the excellent scenario and the memorable photography is credited to Alvin Wyckoff who left the De Milles to do this picture. Robert Ellis was the artist who designed the beautiful sets.

Traveler Claims Mercury Reached 123 Degrees While He Was on a Visit to Shikarpur.

Discussing the hottest place on earth, a "Returned Exile" writes: When travelers from the deserts of Sindh, the banks of the Zambesi, and the black blocks of Queensland begin to compare thermometer readings it is probable that none will yield pride of place until the highest figures known to meteorological science have been reached and surpassed.

In India, Jacobabad has an evil reputation, but there the retired Indian Colonel is beaten on his own ground, as I can claim to have spent a fortnight at Shikarpur in June, the hottest month of 1905, one of the worst years on record.

Shikarpur is not many miles from Jacobabad, and, having no garrison, has not acquired similar fame, but is even more sultry, being surrounded by trees which keep off the breeze that might otherwise bring a breath of early morning coolness from the desert.

When I was there the mercury on several occasions touched 123 degrees in the shade, and for more than ten days on end never fell below 100 degrees at any moment of the day or night.

Contrary to popular belief, the most intense heat is not to be found near the equator, and often outside the tropics altogether. The highest reading in my experience—131 degrees—was taken in Manchuria, but that was in a railway carriage between Port Arthur and Harbin, and would not be accepted as "official."

Further north still, at Blagoveshensk in Siberia, where the thermometer in winter falls to 60 degrees below zero, extreme heat is common in the summer, but only for brief periods.

In the southern hemisphere readings of 110 degrees and 115 degrees are frequently reported from western Australia and northern Queensland, Burke and Townsville being notorious in this respect.

But so far as human comfort is concerned the thermometer is a very poor indicator, and the figures are hardly worth arguing about. In the sticky heat of large cities in July it is possible to be almost melted at 90 degrees, while 110 degrees in the dry Sahara is perfectly bearable.

To vary an old saying, "A woman is as cool as she looks, and a man as hot as he feels."

Colors Controlled by Soil.

The colors of vegetation vary in intensity in a direct ratio to the amount of sunlight combined with coolness of temperature, within certain limits. Examples are the intense redness of apples grown in northern climates and the deep colors of Alpine vegetation. But the soil, as well as other influences, has an effect upon plant colors.

Experiments have been made with reference to the question of artificial control of the colors of plants through the introduction of chemicals into the soil in which they grow. In very small quantities such chemicals are absorbed without apparent injury, but the effect upon the colors is slight. Yellow roses appear to become deeper in hue under the influence of aluminum sulphate and potassium sulphate. With the use of these same chemicals the petals of the white carnation show a tendency to develop red streaks, while, when fed with ammonium sulphate, aluminum sulphate, iron citrate and citric acid, scarlet carnations tend to form white streaks.

Swan Attacks Swimmers.

A swimming race for a challenge at Chertsey, England, has been upset and the contest declared void by the judges, owing to the opposition of a swan. The race was in progress when a big male swan dashed across the Thames and singled out for a fierce attack a swimmer with a bald head.

By breaching water and waving his arms the man beat the bird off, and the swan then assaulted other swimmers so persistently that people on the bank had to go to their rescue.

The swan was resolute as well as angry, and delayed the race so long that it had to be abandoned.

Patience.

"Hello, Jud!" saluted a young swain of the Possum Trot region, addressing another of his kind who was humped up on a log by the roadside. "What are you setting there for? Anything the matter?"

"Nope," was the reply. "Just waiting for Miss Duck Daddle to come along; that's all. I'm going to take her to singing school."

"But, great guns, singing school don't take place till tomorrow night!"

"I know it, but when a feller's in love he don't mind waiting."—Kansas City Star.

The Miracle.

A lady who had been wearing a bracelet watch for two years found that the clasp was becoming a trifle weak. So she went to a jeweler to have it fixed. He fixed it. He also wound the watch part of the ornament, adjusted the hands to indicate the proper hour and started the outfit to ticking merrily. The owner observed all this with utmost amazement.

"Dear me," she exclaimed. "Will it run?"

The Real Object.

"Are you getting out among your constituents to tell them what they ought to do?"

"Not so much that," answered Senator Sorghum, "as to find out what they are going to do."

BIG CONCLAVE IN COLUMBUS

Scioto Commandery Will Attend in a Body and Take Part in Parade.

Many Thousands of Knights-Templar to March and More Than Fifty Bands Will Take Part—Entertainment for Ladies and Reception.

Scioto commandery, Knights-Templar, will next week join with thousands of other Sir Knights from all over the state of Ohio for the annual conclave. The local commandery will have a band and a prominent place in the parade which takes place on Wednesday, October 10.

Fifty-five commanderies of the state have already signified their intention of participating in the gigantic parade. Formal receptions for state and national dignitaries of the Knights-Templar and other special functions will mark the gathering.

Mt. Vernon and Columbus commanderies will act as hosts to the visiting delegations and representatives of each of the 72 commanderies in the state will be present to take part in the business sessions of the organization which are to be held at the Masonic temple.

On Tuesday, October 9, will begin arriving and registration will be held at the temple. The convention proper is to open the following day with the escorting of the Grand Commander F. O. Schoedinger of Columbus, to the temple from the Deshler where official grand commandery headquarters are to be maintained. This escort will be made by Mt. Vernon and Columbus commanderies and will be participated in by all of the dignitaries of the order.

The mammoth parade in which more than 50 bands are expected to take part and several thousand men will march in full Templar regalia is to be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday forming at Broad and Fourth streets. The line of march will be north on Fourth to Chestnut street; west to High street; south to Main street; east to Third street, thence south to Mound, where bands, colors, past commanders and marching delegations will mass in separate units and will march north on High street in mass formation past the reviewing stand at the McKinley monument, where they will be reviewed by the grand commandery officials.

The business will be opened by an address of welcome by Governor Donahy for the state, Mayor Thomas for the city and Safety Director John P. McCune for the Columbus Knights-Templar.

Evening entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock Tuesday with a concert at the temple by the Scottish Rite chorus to be followed at 9:15 by a reception by Grand Commander Schoedinger, the officers and ladies of the grand commandery.

Closing session of the grand commandery will be held Thursday morning at 9:30. At 10 o'clock an auto ride for the visiting ladies will be held, concluding at the Ohio penitentiary, where lunch will be served and entertainment will be provided by the inmates.

A special traction car for Knights-Templars and their families will leave the Circleville station for Columbus at 12 o'clock, noon, Wednesday, October 10, and will stop at Ashville to take on passengers.

Poetry and Prose.

"Dancing is the poetry of motion," "Maybe it is," answered Senator Sorghum. "But give me the solid prose of a march upon the Avenue to an old-fashioned patriotic tune."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

IS A POWERFUL DISINFECTANT

Ozone is a powerful bactericidal agent, and can be used as a disinfectant in place of sulphur dioxide, formaldehyde or hydrocyanic acid. In fact, it is 160 times as powerful a disinfectant as sulphur dioxide, 37 times as formaldehyde, and nearly twice as powerful as hydrocyanic acid gas, writes Floyd W. Parsons in the World's Work. As a deodorant it has no superior. In the case of delicate odors, it destroys them, while with stronger odors it acts as a masking agent, due to its action on the olfactory membrane. When high concentrations of ozone are used, even the most powerful odors are destroyed.

As to the effect of low concentrations of ozone on the human body, there is considerable evidence coming to hand which indicates that the ozone is not only harmless, but that its effect on the individual is beneficial. Medical research has developed the fact that when objectionable odors are present in the air people breathe, their respiration is depressed and the result is a deficient oxidation of the blood. Therefore, whether ozone really masks an odor or completely destroys it, the effect is healthful because the individual breathes more freely and fully. In other words, when bad odors are present in the air, there is an involuntary contraction of respiration, of which bodily reaction the individual is entirely unconscious.

RED HAIR IN MEN AND WOMEN

Altogether Charming on the Fair Sex, Says Writer, but Seldom on the Sterner.

An English writer has recorded the following observations about red hair: "With apologies to any male friends of mine (I cannot remember many) who may have been entitled to the name of Rufus, I am bound to say that I never knew any man who would not have looked better with hair of any other color," says Prof. Saintsbury in "A Scrap Book."

"On the other hand, red hair in girls and women is often—I think much more often than not—perfectly charming. Brick-dust red, with no gloss, is ugly enough, no doubt; but then all hair—except a very peculiar kind of black—requires gloss. Every other shade, from the lightest nasturtium to the darkest Auburn chestnut, can be beautiful. This Venice knew, and, long before it, the Greeks. The Romans did not like red hair, but the Romans were people of very doubtful taste in many points of esthetics."

Cat Has Many Relations.

The unsuspecting cat has many kinsfolk in the matter of names. Conspicuous among these is the catfish. The naming of the common denizen of fresh water has been explained in more ways than one, and the reader may take his choice. One recognized authority contents himself with the statement that the name, as commonly applied to the fishes of the family Siluridae, is an allusion to the long barbels or feelers about the mouth, which have been regarded as resembling the whiskers of a cat. This explanation is widely accepted, but the other authorities set forth a probable reason for the name in the statement that when a fish of this species is captured and brought to the surface it makes a sound like the purring of a cat. Another offers both the barbels and the purring and throws in the added suggestion that the name was influenced by "some other fancied resemblance to a cat."

They Knew the Witness.

A circuit judge was holding court in a small backwoods town. A local character came up for trial, took the stand in due time and spun his narrative. The judge, something of a wag, charged the jury as follows: "If you believe the defendant's statement, he is guilty. That is all."

The jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. Somewhat surprised, the judge after court asked the foreman why such a verdict was rendered.

"We thought we were following instructions, your honor," exclaimed the foreman. "We know that bird. You couldn't believe him on oath."

Lost His Opportunity.

I was strolling along with my sweetheart at a fair, very happy, until I discovered her former beau showering honeyed smiles on her. As she didn't ignore him, I became worried, and resolved to propose at once. While deciding just how, I absent-mindedly gazed at the sky and allowed her to lead the way. Finally I implored her to be my own little "dove." "I'm afraid I'd be a hungry dove," she answered; "I've led you to three ice cream stands and two lunch counters, but you just gazed at the sky, so I'm going back to Jim."—Chicago Journal.

First Punctuation Marks.

In the oldest manuscripts the words usually join each other without break or separation. Manuscripts without punctuation marks of any kind generally are accepted as predating the Eighth century. Those which have no capital or other divisions are always very old, and the fewer and easier the abbreviations, the older it is. The most ancient manuscripts still preserved are those written in Egyptian hieroglyphs. Next to them in point of age are the Latin manuscripts found at Herculaneum.

Course of Hudson River. The Hudson river rises in the hills to the west of Lake Champlain and after a southerly course of about 200 miles falls into the Atlantic ocean below the city of New York. It is navigable as far as Troy, 166 miles above New York, and is connected by canals with Lakes Champlain and Erie.

Woman Started First Daily Paper. The first daily paper in the world is said to have been established by a woman, Miss Elizabeth Mallet, in London, March, 1702. She polished and edited the Daily Courant, which she founded "for the purpose of doing greater justice to women in general through the elimination of imperfections which the ordinary papers contain."

Odd Kind of Fish.

No fish is stranger than the little sea-horse. It has a body encased in rings of bony mail, a horse-shaped head set at right angles and a prehensile tail to grasp seaweed in which it hides. It always floats with its queer head up and erect. Another peculiar thing about the sea-horse is that the male fish carries the eggs in a pouch situated under his tail until the young are hatched and large enough to look out for themselves.

WASTED FORMULA

By H. IRVING KING

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

BETH CURTIS was a stenographer in a big insurance office. In spite of her good looks, she knew stenography and typewriting thoroughly and had laid up for a rainy day a few hundred dollars in the bank and a store of common sense and resourcefulness. And she was twenty-one.

Harry Parkman was clerk in the same office; was twenty-seven, a hard worker and a competent all-around man at his business. He was gifted with persistence and staying qualities which were admirable. He went at things systematically.

That was the method he used in building up his intimacy, which had now so far progressed that he called at her boarding house every Thursday night and took her out to dinner or to the theater once every fortnight. Had they been living in a country town everybody would have said they were "keeping company." As they lived in the big city, and were both reticent as to their personal affairs, nobody knew anything about it except the people in the boarding house and they did not care a hang. In the office they were always Miss Curtis and Mr. Parkman to each other.

Harry intended marriage and so did Beth; but Harry, somehow, kept putting off "popping the question." A dozen times he had concocted in his mind a formula of avowal and rehearsed it mentally as he approached Beth's boarding house. Then he would become dissatisfied with it as not quite coming up to the high standard which the occasion demanded and he would put it off until next week, by which time he hoped to think up something more worthy. Beth knew he was going to propose some day and she knew, also, that by artfully and skillfully giving him a "jolt," she could make him propose any time she wanted to. But then the situation was very pleasant as it was—why hurry matters? In another year's time they would both be better equipped financially to enter the married state.

The head of the insurance office which employed Harry and Beth was Horace McPherson—large, portly, florid, fifty-five years old and with whitening hair; wealthy, of course. For five years he had been a widower. For the past year an important part of Beth's work consisted in taking dictation from Mr. McPherson. He had been gruff with her at first, then paternal and at last almost gallant—nothing disrespectful. Horace McPherson was a gentleman; he was getting into the Indian summer of his years, that was all. Harry felt annoyed naturally, but he had every confidence in Beth and no fear that the wealth of a whole clan of McPhersons would dazzle the true-blue eyes of his Beth.

When old Horace began to use sulphur and sage on his hair and his waistcoats and cravats began to show a youthful and hilarious disposition everybody felt that a crisis was approaching. Then one day the approaching crisis arrived. When Beth went into the "chief's" office and seated herself demurely with her pencil and notebook to take dictation Horace said:

"Before we begin dictating, Miss Curtis, I have something to say which I hope will not be entirely displeasing or entirely unexpected to you," and then he went on to state his case in a very manly and straightforward manner.

Beth answered him as frankly and they had a rather long talk with each other of the "heart to heart" variety before she came sailing out of the private office as cool, calm and collected as if she had done nothing but take notes for the last three-quarters of an hour.

That was on Thursday and Thursday night was Harry's night for calling. Harry had prepared a proposing formula which he was determined to put into operation that night or perish in the attempt.

As they sat in a corner of the boarding-house parlor he had actually got off the first two carefully prepared and well-polished lines of the proposal when Beth interrupted him with, "Oh, Harry, I had a proposal of marriage today."

"Who from?" growled Harry, "old Horace?"

"Yes, old Horace—Mr. McPherson," replied Beth, "and he is an old dear."

"Glad you think so," said Harry glumly. "What did you say to it?"

"Oh," replied Beth, looking down, "I told him I was already engaged."

"Already engaged," gasped Harry. "To whom, pray?"

"Why, to you, of course," said Beth. Harry's formula vanished into the limbo of proposals that were never made, questions that were never popped, and right there in the boarding-house parlor he took Beth in his arms and kissed her.

The next morning the "chief" sent for Harry. "Understand," said he, "that you and Miss Curtis are engaged to be married."

"We are, sir," replied Harry defiantly.

"I congratulate you," said Horace. Mr. Stiness is retiring at the end of the month. I shall make you chief clerk in his stead. Good-day."

Doing Better.

"Have you always been a tramp?" "No, mum. I was wunst much worse off than I am now. I started life as a poet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

New Idea in Electric Sifter.

A manufacturer of a successful electric sifter, which has been used as a sand riddle on the molding floor of foundries and for similar purposes, has developed this idea in making a device that sifts out material suspended in liquids. The machine is wholly inclosed except for the half-closed top which prevents the liquor from splashing over.

After Thinking Twice.
Father was standing before the fire lecturing his son and heir on the necessity for thinking twice before speaking once.
"Father!" exclaimed the boy suddenly.
The parent held up a warning finger. "Think again before you speak and then I will answer you."
The boy pondered for a minute or so and then said: "Father, I have thought twice and now I am quite convinced that your coat tails are on fire."—Boston Herald.

Still Same Age.
When mother introduced Dorothy to the caller, she said: "My little girl was five years old yesterday."
"And I am five years old today, too," said Dorothy.—Boston Transcript.

Bible Thought for Today
RICHES DO NOT SATISFY.—He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them; and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?—Eccles. 5:10, 11.

If Italy and Greece jump at each other's throats when they get mad, and forget that they belong to the League of Nations, what would England and France do if they came to a breaking point? The people of America knew what they were doing when, by a margin of 7,000,000, they voted against the league in 1920.

It was probably only a coincidence, but when the four convicts escaped from the penitentiary the other day they headed east in Columbus, in the direction of the executive mansion, where four of their "pals" are quartered.

It is a shame about the Third party splitting. For a time it promised to provide a rough house for all political malcontents who wanted a home.

Governor Donahey likes to call his gravel road policy a "progressive policy." Well, a pig sty by any other name would smell the same.

Senator Brookhart says Russia is coming back. When she arrives it might tell the world something about the temperature of hell.

Thankful for Typewriter.
We wonder now how folks ever got along without an instrument which produces legible manuscript. It may in time reduce the knowledge of chirography to the mere matter of penning one's own name, but how much time it has saved already from deciphering illegible writing is beyond computation. The typewriter makes for speed, but the greatest boon it conferred has been in removing the need for the scrawl with the pen.
While many of the present-day utilities which are indispensable have had their development in the last half century, for those whose job it is to make records or grind out "copy" none is entitled to a higher rank than the typewriter, which produces that which may be read easily. And from those on whom falls the duty of reading what others have written, blessings are showered on those who have brought the typewriter into such general use.—Exchange.

Heirs to Peerages.
Some four hundred British peerages are extinct, of which 120 have lapsed since 1900. Five went last year through the demise without successors of Lords Ludlow, Bryce, Northcliffe, Breadalbane and Lindley. This year there are four so far, being the baronies of Seaforth, Weardale, Sanderson and Roe. Sometimes peerages are revived which were long dormant. The longest abeyance was 547 years, in the case of the barony of Strabolgi, terminated in 1916 in favor of the petitioner, Mr. C. M. Kenworthy. No doubt there are in Canada heirs to some of these dormant peerages, because proof is a costly process, and very difficult.

FINALLY SHE GOT TO IT

But Woman on Phone Had Many Important Things to Tell the Fire Station First.

"Halloa!" shouted the fireman on the telephone.

"Halloa!" came back in feminine tones. "Is this the fire station?"

"Yes; what is it?"

"Well, I want to inform you that my garden runs right up to the walk that runs along the side of the Browns' walk next door—"

"You've got the wrong number, ma'am," said the fireman.

"You said this was the fire station, didn't you?"

"Yes; but—"

"Well, I'm trying hard to raise a respectable lawn, and have lately planted grass seed as far as the Browns' walk. Then, besides the grass seed, I had it tidied up and made ready for planting bulbs, and—"

"I say, ma'am, you are mistaken in the telephone number," insisted the fireman. "This—"

"Isn't this the fire station?"

"It is; but—"

"Very well. Now, I want to say further that, however careless our neighbors are with their garden, we are very much the other way. In fact, a pretty lawn, adorned with a variety of flowers, is what I and my husband are looking for next season," said the lady.

"For heaven's sake, ma'am, what has this to do with the fire station?"

"Oh, well, our house is No. 200 School street, and the Browns' house next door is on fire. Now, don't let your firemen trample—"

But the fireman had dropped the receiver.

TURN WARSHIPS INTO RAZORS

New Salvage Has Been Discovered for Cast-Off Warships That Are to Be Broken Up.

It was the immortal Jerry Simpson who said, "What do we want a navy for; to plow corn with?" Jerry's question might be answered now: "No, but to shave with."

The Orion, one of the older British dreadnaughts, is being broken up in an English shipyard, and the best of its steel is to be used for making safety razor blades, observes the Wichita Eagle.

There ought to be a good many first-class shaves in a dreadnaught. Even such a submarine as Great Britain is about to put into commission, mounting a 13.5-inch gun, ought to keep a household in razor blades for quite some time. This kind of ship costs approximately $6,000,000; the battle-ships about six or seven times that amount. For ten years they may serve to keep their nation's flag afloat with due honor, but then they begin to get a little out of date and must be turned into safety razor blades.

Henceforth we shall not consider money expended upon a big warship altogether lost, even if we never get a chance to use that ship to sink other ships. We always can salvage a million good shaves out of a $30,000,000 warship.

IN THE BACK PARLOR

Pa—What was that noise? Sounded like something parting.

Ma—Anabel's young man tearing himself away, I think.

Thoroughly Joined.

A bridal couple set out on their honeymoon from a New Jersey town with the bridegroom's left hand shackled to the right hand of the bride. The key to the handcuffs was in the groom's pocket. The happy couple were afraid that some of their jocular friends might try to separate them after the wedding. It is considered a good joke in the town to start the bride away on a north-bound train and the groom on one south-bound.

Electric Light Angling.

An experiment is being made in Norwegian waters to catch fish with the aid of electric light. There is a quantity of brisling in Hardanger fjord, but they lie at a depth too great for them to be caught in nets. An attempt was made to attract them to the surface by means of electric light shining from the deck of a steamer. Already a certain amount of success has been attained.
